Tax Revision Centers First On Undivided Profits Levy

Present Revenue Estimates Should Be Sufficient, Magill States.

Capital Gains Tax Study Also Slated

Committee to Get Data on Disputed Impost at Hearing Today.

The unpopular undivided profits tax law yesterday was scheduled for immediate study and attempts at revision by a special House tax sub-committee already committed to a general revamping of taxes without change in the total yield.

The sub-committee of nine House members cast a sidelong glance at an uncertain business picture as it slated the much-berated undistributed earnings tax number one subject for discussion as it opened its hearings yesterday.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill told members that present revenue estimates should be sufficient to carry Government expenditures if present yields are maintained. Like the President, he favored revision, but no substantial increase in the tax total.

Magill to Appear Today.

Magill was asked to return today, bearing Treasury information on yields to date on the undivided profits tax, and general administrative experience with the operation of the law.

Asked if the tax would be revised with an eye to improvement in businesses claiming hardships under the tax, Chairman Fred M. Vinson said:

"We want to be as helpful as we can, but I think it best to make no predictions at this time. Actually, we do not know and cannot say what we are going to do. It is results that we are after, and I am hopeful the results will be helpful."

Both the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains and losses levies have been targets of persistent complaints by business interests, and recently high Administration officials have favored modifications. The President alone has remained publicly silent.

The House tax sub-committee will attack revision of the general tax laws one subject at a time. Although undivided profits taxes have been placed first on the agenda, modification of the capital gains tax is definitely slated for consideration at an early date. The sub-committee will frame tentative recommendations, then pass to other tax subjects in prolonged studies that may last throughout the special session. A preliminary tax revision bill will be prepared by the sub-committee, and public hearings held by the full committee, before the bill moves to the House floor probably early in the January session of Congress.

Relief for Debt-Ridden Firms.

Vinson, chairman of the sub-committee, and the outstanding House authority on taxation, was sponsor of the proposed "cushions" the House wrote into the original law which were virtually eliminated by the Senate. Indications are that the new modifications will offer greater business tax relief than the original Vinson "cushions."

While the sub-committee chairman declined to speculate on what would be done, he recognized "general sentiment for relieving the hardships" complained of by big and little businessmen.

Following are some of the changes

From today's column:

"Tourists from the old home town dropped in today and I arranged for them to visit a studio. When we left I asked them what one thing had impressed them most. The friendliness, they answered, after a moment's thought, and cited several instances to prove the lack of formality between the set laborers and the stars."

4-Hr. Parley Revives Hope of Labor Peace

Delegates Willing to Discuss New Procedure for Fixing Scope of Industrial Unions; Both Sides Asked to Preserve Status Quo Truce.

By Robert C. Albright.

A thin shaft of hope yesterday shone through heavily overcast peace negotiations of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, as both labor factions sought a new procedural ground for agreement.

Guarded optimism followed a four-hour conference of negotiating committees at the Willard Hotel.

No decisions were reached, but the atmosphere was improved by general willingness to discuss three proposals for determining which industries should have industrial unions, with a status quo truce pending settlement.

The proposals were:

That the Committee of Thirteen (3 from A. F. of L. and 10 from C. I. O.) be enlarged for procedural purposes.

That sub-committees be appointed to take up matters of conflict between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. in individual industries.

That an attempt be made to agree

Dewey Indicts Foe's Client for Racket Slaying

Schneider, After Resigning, Asserts He Defended Goldis as 'Duty.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—With a keen sense of dramatic timing, Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey today produced a first degree murder indictment against Morris Goldis, 27, who was released for lack of evidence three years ago in a racket killing.

The indictment, kept secret for three weeks, was handed up to Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora less than 24 hours after Charles A. Schneider announced his resignation as assistant State attorney general.

Schneider, who today renewed threats of a libel suit against Dewey, was named in one of the prosecutor's recent campaign speeches as the "well-connected lawyer" and Tammany district leader who defended Goldis when he first was arrested.

"Duty," Says Schneider.

Dewey, speaking October 27 in his successful campaign for district attorney, declared that "this politician assistant attorney general . . . was paid with part of the money collected . . . from the flour trucking industry" for his work in the case.

Schneider replied then that it was his duty as a lawyer to defend Goldis and today he said:

"I would rather be Charley Schneider, maligned, stigmatized, libeled and tossed about than be

G.O.P. Decision On Parley May Be Postponed

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—A projected mid-term Republican convention—advocated by former President Hoover, but termed inopportune by Alf M. Landon—was debated by members of the national committee tonight amid indications a definite decision would be deferred.

National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton expressed the belief that committeemen and committeewomen who came here to vote on the proposal tomorrow should select a policy committee which would report to the full committee later on whether such a conference should be held.

Landon Outlines Stand.

Hamilton said he would regard the appointment of a policy group numbering between 75 and 150 as the first step toward a convention. He added:

"I still believe a preponderance of the members wants action to determine where the party stands."

Hamilton voiced his views at a press conference after increasing opposition to the plan culminated in a letter from Landon defining his attitude for the first time.

"I do not believe this is an opportune time for even the kind of convention I have outlined," the titular leader of the party wrote to Representative Joseph W. Martin of that as far as I am concerned, if

Hetty Green's $40,000,000 Goes To Daughter After Will Dispute

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—Settlement of a long court battle over the $40,000,000 to $60,000,000 estate of the late Col. Edward H. R. Green was announced tonight by Surrogate Harry E. Owens, of Essex County. The surrogate awarded the bulk of the estate to Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, a sister, who, he said, in turn agreed to pay $500,000 to Col. Green's widow, Mrs. Mabel Harlow Green.

Surrogate Owen rejected the widow's contention that a pre-nuptial agreement waiving her rights to a dower interest in Col. Green's fortune—which he received from his mother—was procured through fraud.

He ordered the colonel's will, naming his sister principal legatee, admitted to probate.

"I am glad to announce," he said, "that Mrs. Wilks has consented to the payment by the estate of $500,000 to Mrs. Green and that papers have been executed which acknowledge Mrs. Wilks' right to her mother's estate and which terminate this litigation and the possibility of any further litigation between Mrs. Green and Mrs. Wilks in respect of the decedent's estate."

The decision, which followed a series of hearings in Elizabethtown, N. Y.; New York City, Florida and Texas, did not attempt to dispose of a contest among four States for the right to levy taxes on the estate.

Col. Green, eccentric son of the famed Hetty Green, woman financier, died at Lake Placid in June, 1936.

Mrs. Green, whom he married in July, 1917, contended that she was entitled to a dower share of one-third.

Algic Sailors Held to Jury; Mates Cited

C. I. O. Gets Warrants; Aid Refused Drowning Seaman, Four Say.

A. F. L. Head Backs U.S. Stand on Sea Strike at Montevideo.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Nov. 4.—Fourteen seamen of the steamship Algic, Government-owned freighter, were held for the Federal grand jury here today on charges involving the mutiny law, following a hearing before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen, at Baltimore.

The sailors were released after $500 bonds had been posted for each.

Later, Commissioner Cullen issued warrants charging E. B. Watters, second mate of the Algic, and John F. Pike, third mate, with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Howell V. Gill, a seaman of the Algic.

Green Backs Commission.

Meantime, in Washington, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, entered the controversy between Maritime Commission officials and the National Maritime Union over the steamship Algic strike with an indorsement of the commission's attitude toward strikes at sea. It was feared that Green's statement might affect the precarious peace negotiations of the A. F. of L. and the Committee for Industrial Organization. The N. M. U. is a C. I. O. affiliate.

"Unauthorized and spasmodic strikes in violation of contracts entered into are indefensible and could not be supported by the American Federation of Labor," Green said, with apparent reference to the sit-down in the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay.

Joseph Curran, head of the Maritime Union, asserted Green's statement "threw a spike in the peace negotiations," that "Green, as usual, is talking through his hat," and that "I'm certainly going to ask some pointed questions tomorrow when we meet."

C. I. O. Gets Warrants.

The warrants for the two officers on the manslaughter charge were requested by Wilfred T. McQuaid, defense counsel for the seamen, retained by the National Maritime Union, which is affiliated with the C. I. O. McQuaid told the Commissioner that Gill was drowned at Victoria, Brazil, in attempting to "jump ship."

The sailors contended the negligence of the officers contributed to the death of Gill. Four of the seamen testified before Cullen that Gill and three other men got into a small boat which swamped. The sailors said they ran to the two officers and asked permission to lower one of the Algic's boats.

Refused Rescue, Four Say.

"Pike refused," Seaman David Tuttle testified, "and said there would be no boats lowered because the men had taken the small boat and it was their own fault."

The charges are an outgrowth of the action of the Algic's crew at Montevideo on September 10. The crew went on a sit-down strike there because of a strike by the Stevedores Syndicate of Montevideo. The strike ended after Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the United States Maritime Commission

'Earliest' Woman, Ape-Like, Rebuilt From Bit of Skull

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Nov. 4.—The "mate" of the prehistoric Peking man, Sinanthropus Pekinensis, was exhibited for the first time today by Dr. Franz Weidenreich, director of the Coenozoic Laboratory, of the Rockefeller-endowed Peiping Union Medical College.

"Madame" Sinanthropus, whom Weidenreich credits with being China's earliest pioneer woman and also the earliest known human being, was represented by a plaster cast of a composite skull worked out by the scientist this summer and autumn while war guns boomed nearby and bombers droned overhead.

Weidenreich related how the work proceeded smoothly in assembling the female skull out of hundreds of fragments dug up at Choukoutien diggings, 40 miles southwest of Peiping, and scaling down male fragments to female size. The biggest fragment found was part of a woman's skull.

The assembled skull showed what Weidenreich described as surprisingly ape-like characteristics, which were not anticipated.

Hitler Seeks Peace-Maker Role in China

Nanking Diplomats Here Say Acceptance Is 'Not Probable.'

Japan Reported Backing Plan; Fuehrer Would Let Colonies Wait.

Far East Peace Moves.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany was reported ready to assume the role of umpire in settling the Sino-Japanese War. He was said to have Japan's acceptance of the plan, with Chinese acceptance reported near.

At Brussels, the United States joined forces with Britain and France in a move to mobilize world opinion against the "Fascist menace" as the Far Eastern peace conference struggled to overcome Italo-German-Japanese resistance.

Hitler May Umpire.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 4.—A trustworthy source close to the Reich chancellery reported tonight Reichsfuehrer Hitler expected to become the umpire in the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Unofficial feelers put out to the German government by both Japanese and Chinese, he said, have convinced Hitler mediation by him would be not only welcome but crowned with success.

[Chinese Ambassador C. T. Wang last night told The Post he had not heard of a suggestion that Hitler be made umpire of issues involved in the Sino-Japanese conflict. His statement was echoed by the embassy counselor, Z. T. Ing, who said Hitler's acceptance by both sides in the undeclared war is "possible, but not probable." He was inclined to discount strongly the Berlin reports.]

The informant asserted informal offers conveyed partly through Oskar Trautmann, German Ambassador to China, and partly through Japanese reached Hitler early last night.

Aide Dashes to Rome.

The chancellor then commissioned Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to Great Britain, to hurry to Rome to conclude an Italian-German-Japanese pact against the Communist International, it was stated, and return almost immediately to pave the way for mediation.

(The German Embassy in Rome said an Italian-German-Japanese pact against communism would be signed Saturday in the Italian capital. Von Ribbentrop left Berlin for Rome Thursday.)

The source close to the chancellery added, in substance:

Hitler, it was understood, would accept the role of umpire only if he had definite assurances from both sides in the Far Eastern conflict that his ruling would be accepted.

Far-going assurances along that line from the Japanese were said to be in his hands already.

He expected from the Chinese a similar readiness.

Germans Trained Chinese.

Germany regards herself as a natural mediator, as German generals trained Chinese troops and, in part, are still active in China while at the same time Germany is tied to Japan by close bonds of friendship.

Von Ribbentrop, it was understood in chancellery circles, was to impress upon Premier Mussolini of Italy the desirability of his country leaving the Brussels conference on the Chinese-Japanese conflict just as soon as Hitler's role as umpire should become established fully.

It was stated Hitler was so impressed with the possibilities of Germany's role as a mediator that he had decided for the moment to

Wife of U.S. Envoy Is Ill of Infection Suffered in Russia

Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the American Ambassador to Russia, has been ill for several weeks from an infection contracted in Russia, The Post learned last night.

Mrs. Davies, the former Marjorie Post Hutton, at one time listed as one of America's ten wealthiest women, returned to the Capital to attend the centenary celebration today of the Mount Vernon Seminary, of which she is a graduate.

She has advised officials of the exclusive school that because of her illness she would be able to attend only a part of the celebration, The Post learned.

Every precaution was taken by the Davieses when they left to take possession of the American Embassy at Moscow to insure themselves and members of their entourage the best possible foods and other comforts. Huge quantities of cream and butter, frozen to insure preservation, were shipped to Russia.

New York, Nov. 4.—The New York Daily News, in a copyright story tonight, quoted Ernest Simpson, former husband of the Duchess of Windsor, as admitting he would marry Mrs. Mary Kirk Raffray, long-time friend of the duchess, who is in Reno seeking a divorce.

The News said the wedding probably would take place next week in "some small town" near New York after Mrs. Raffray obtains a divorce from Jacques A. Raffray, wealthy New Yorker.

Super-Cabinet To Declare War Urged in Japan

New Ministers Expected to Take Over Nov. 10 as Navy Consents.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Nov. 5.—The controlled press reported today the navy had agreed to creation of a supermilitary cabinet and was urging a simultaneous declaration of war against China.

The army and regular cabinet of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye previously agreed to formation of an "imperial headquarters," which would have supreme power.

The authoritative newspaper Asahi said the navy's consent assured immediate establishment of the war cabinet, probably November 10.

The Hochi Shimbun said the navy was urging a declaration of war but the army opposed the move on the grounds trade would be restricted and international complications created.

Hochi asserted proponents of a war declaration were increasing.

The new cabinet probably would

British Accept Franco Rule on De Facto Basis

Agents to Be Exchanged; Restoration of Spanish Monarchy Promised.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 4.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons late today that Great Britain, in a move without precedent in international relations, is arranging an exchange of diplomatic "agents" with Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Spanish insurgents.

Chamberlain emphasized that the agents would have "no diplomatic status" but his disclosure was generally interpreted as "de facto" recognition of the insurgents.

Franco notified the British Embassy at Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, that the wealthy Duke of Alba would become his "agent" in London.

It was understood that Belgium might be among the first to follow the British example.

The Duke of Alba succeeded in winning Chamberlain over to the exchange of "agents," it was re-

All of Us Live Under Shadow Of Karl Marx, Says Wallace

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace told a preview audience at the National Book Fair tonight that "whether we like it or not, everyone in the world today is different because of 'Das Kapital'" (Karl Marx's work on socialism).

"Without 'Das Kapital,'" he said, "there would have been neither the Communist nor the Fascist experiments. More than any other book of the nineteenth century, all of us today are living under the shadow of 'Das Kapital.' . . .

"Most of the young people of the next generation are not going to read the 'Origin of Species' or the 'Wealth of Nations' or 'Das Kapital' or any of the other powerful books of the past if they can possibly avoid it.

"But many of them will read the powerful books of the future. The Duke, in Paris, Silent; Expected to Give Decision Today.

10 to 1 Against Visit, Says Friend

Edward Refuses Offer of Efficiency Expert to 'Step Down.'

By the United Press.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor may cancel their tour of the United States because of bitter opposition in labor circles to their friend, Charles E. Bedaux.

The duke went to bed in Paris early today undecided whether to make the trip or not, with the likelihood he would make his decision known between 9 a. m. and 10 a. m.

Bedaux, personal representative of the famous couple, just before boarding a train yesterday to go to New York, said the trip might be canceled. He left the train at Newark, N. J., instead of continuing into New York, and no comment was available last night.

A spokesman for the duke, in Paris, said "We have not changed our plans, which are to sail on the Bremen Saturday, but we will have to take cognizance of the situation when we see the morning press."

The situation was precipitated Wednesday night when the Baltimore Federation of Labor adopted a resolution "condemning" the Duke for coming to America with Charles Bedaux, "arch-enemy of labor," and warning Baltimore labor organizations not to be "taken in" by "slumming parties professing to help and to study labor."

Frank Getty, an associate of Bedaux, last night announced in Washington that Bedaux, talking to the duke by transatlantic telephone, had expressed his willingness to withdraw from connection with the proposed trip, but that the duke, "thanking him for his suggestion, definitely and positively waved it aside."

Bedaux Denies System Hit.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Charles E. Bedaux, personal representative of the Duke and Duchess, emphasized, as he left Washington yesterday that the possible change in plans was not due to criticism of him or his much-publicized labor-saving system which drew the fire of the American Federation of Labor, but that it was due to "something about which I cannot talk."

The duke's tentative itinerary includes visits to slum-clearance and Federal housing projects, as well as a study of labor conditions in numerous factories.

On departing for New York, Bedaux said:

"We are all human. Nothing is certain. Some of us may die. Some

Tighter Rules On Transports Due at Airport

Bureau May Make Change Today; Relaxation in Future Indicated.

A tightening of the restrictions on transport plane operation at Washington Airport may be forthcoming today, it was learned last night.

Pending publication of the new rules, Bureau of Air Commerce officials refused comment.

Pilots responding to the Department of Commerce poll on regulation of the airport here are said to have favored extension of the regulations and the placing of more stringent limitations on use of the field.

While many of the pilots failed to answer the questionnaire, others advised the department to "confer with our association's representatives." These suggestions obviously refer to David L. Behncke, president of the Airline Pilots Association, and Edward G. Hamilton, Washington representative of the organization, who have consistently favored strict limitation of airline operations at Washington Airport.

Denies Decision.

Howard E. Rough, assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, said: "We haven't reached any conclusion and are still working on the regulations."

At the same time it was understood in aviation circles outside the Department of Commerce that some relaxation of the present requirements might be expected if airport authorities agreed to remove the blimp hangar and other buildings. Such action, it was said, would permit the opening of a new east-west runway across Military road.

Meanwhile, civic organizations, aided by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, continued their drive to prevent construction of a Bureau of Public Roads laboratory near the proposed Gravelly Point air terminal site.

This site has support of President Roosevelt, the Washington Board of Trade and the Park and Planning Commission, which opposed a measure, passed at the last session of Congress, for enlargement of Washington Airport.

Warns of Bolling Field.

Proposals to move air operations to Bolling Field yesterday were characterized by Samuel J. Solomon, manager of Washington Airport, as "highly dangerous." He declared there is already air traffic congestion here, and pointed out that there have been several mid-air plane collisions.

At present transport planes weighing more than 15,000 pounds are restricted to the long north-south runway, and in bad weather, when conditions are not suitable for landings and take-offs at Washington Airport, transport operations are moved to Bolling Field.

Multiple Taxation Security Problem

One phase of the social security act which an advisory council may consider today is multiple taxation of some persons for old-age benefits.

The council—six representatives of employers, six of employes and 12 of the public—will recommend changes in the social security act, if it decides any are needed. The group was appointed by the Senate Finance Committee and the Social Security Board.

The multiple taxation problem arose because under present law an employe paid by two or more employers during a calendar year is taxed on the first $3,000 of each salary. Both employers also are taxed.

Thus an individual paid $3,000 by each of three employers pays a tax on $9,000, whereas one paid $10,000 by a single employer is taxed on only $3,000—the maximum of taxable salary from a single employer.

N. Y. Chamber Assails Powers of Wage Bill

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York in a resolution adopted today denounced the Black-Connery wages and hours bill as involving "the delegation to an executive-appointed board" of the "powers of life and death over employers and industry."

The resolution expressed sympathy with "the humanitarian principle that conditions responsible for the oppressively long hours of labor and wage below . . . a decent standard of living should be promptly remedied."

Motor Union Assesses Members in Ford Drive

Detroit, Nov. 4 (AP).—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, announced today an assessment of $1 on each member of the union to "finance the organization of employes of the Ford Motor Co."

The announcement stated funds from the assessments would be used to organize not only the Ford plant at Dearborn, Detroit suburb, but al Ford plants elsewhere in the country.

Working for Washington

Cooper, Petworth Civic Leader, Is Suffrage Group Organizer

EARL W. COOPER.

By Christine Sadler.

The Petworth Citizens Association, organized in 1902, has 1,250 paid-up members. That makes it next to the top in the matter of membership. Only Chevy Chase claims more.

Petworth's "territory" covers approximately 100 Washington blocks, in which about 25,000 persons live. When the association was organized Buchanan street was its northern boundary and it had less than 10,000 citizens in its area.

President Earl W. Hooper, who has lived in Petworth 12 years, moved twice to keep on the edge of the fast-growing community, but finally settled at 5001 Fourth street northwest, with no hope of escaping the expansion.

"Our association has gone through all the trials and tribulations of a new section," he said.

One of the present fights of the organization is to keep for school and recreational purposes the land used by the District Tuberculosis Hospital before it was moved to its new home in Maryland.

A teacher-training school, a vocational school and a library are the association's idea of what should go on the tract—which runs from Upshur to Allison street and adjoins the site of the Roosevelt Senior High School. (Suggestions that part of Gallinger Hospital be located there have been made by District officials).

The asosciation is winning out, it appears. The library has been approved, money for it appropriated. Construction will begin shortly. Then the association will concentrate on efforts to secure the two schools.

Cooper is one of the organizers of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association and believes that through it the local government idea finally will get somewhere.

"I feel that through this separate organization we will be able to agree on a program that can be presented to Congress as a unit. As long as every person was presenting a different plan, Congress did not know what to think.

His association has long been on record as approving local suffrage.

Cooper is beginning his third year as president of the group. He became secretary in 1927 and has been second vice president and first vice president since then. One of his outstanding services to the association was in establishment of the Petworth Citizen, monthly publication which he worked up 12 years ago while he was at home recuperating from an appendicities operation.

A native of Ohio, Cooper came to the District in 1913 on civil service appointment as stenographer assigned to the Department of Justice. Several years ago he and his wife started an independent court reporting service.

When business hours are over—and they are extremely long except during the court vacation months in summer—Cooper finds his recreation in civic movements, and Mrs. Cooper takes an active part in activities of her Sunday school class. They have two daughters.

U. S. Financing Of Rails Sighted By Bank Aide

Repressive Control Acts Point That Way, Kuhn, Loeb Counsel Says.

By the Associated Press.

A New York banking firm's attorney told the Senate Railroad Financing Committee yesterday repressive control measures are bringing railroads to the point where the Government will have to take over their future financing.

Robert T. Swaine, attorney for Kuhn, Loeb & Co., said it was impossible to "anticipate accurately what Congress and the Interstate Commerce Commission" would do.

Senator Truman (Democrat), Montana, acting committee chairman, previously had commented that the railroads faced Government operation unless they put their financing on firm ground.

"That's what you're heading for if you keep on having receivership after receivership," he said during testimony of Benjamin Buttenweiser, a Kuhn-Loeb partner, on the financial history of the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Questioning had brought evidence that several banking firms received a total of $9,538,210 in commissions for underwriting securities of the Missouri Pacific and its subsidiaries from 1921 to 1930, inclusive.

Too Many Factors Entered.

Kuhn, Loeb underwrote securities and was reorganization manager when the Missouri Pacific was reorganized in 1917. The railroad went into receivership in 1933, the same year it became a part of the $3,000,000,000 Van Sweringen rail system, and the committee is investigating proposals for another reorganization of the line.

Swaine said he knew little about the details of the 1917 Missouri Pacific reorganization, but was familiar with that of the St. Paul. Referring to financial plans in the latter's reorganization, he said:

"It was impossible to forecast that the rate structure would be depressed as it was, that labor costs would increase, that material costs would increase, all by deliberate Government action, as they have.

"If the ICC says the railroads can earn only enough to pay 20 per cent of the interest on current capital, who is going to put more capital into them?

"I'm not criticizing the ICC. They've got a factual situation there and I might do the same thing myself. I'm just giving you the facts."

Landon's Letter on Convention

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 4.—Text of the letter of former Gov. Alf M. Landon to Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts:

My dear Mr. Martin:

Since the national committee will be called upon to consider a proposed mid-term convention, it faces a grave responsibility in its meeting tomorrow. I cannot agree with some members of the committee who would limit the scope of action of such a convention if it is called.

Everyone knows where the Republican party stands on the fundamental principles to which some favor limiting the action of the convention. We have already declared ourselves in platforms and repeated public statements on "the enormous centralization of power in Washington; the breakdown of the dual system of Government; the usurpation by the Executive of the powers of the legislative and the effort to control the judicial branches of Government." No one can question the devotion of the Republican party to the bill of rights and the maintenance of individual liberty. We are already in opposition to a Government-regulated economy.

Therefore, if we are to have a convention, the people of the country will want to know where the Republican Party stands, definitely and concretely, on farm measures, labor and unemployment legislation, the tariff, and on fiscal and financial policies, including the gold and silver purchase acts. None of these are temporary matters.

Furthermore, if the convention is to be held, it must be representative of the hearts and the convictions and the enthusiasm of the rank and file of all groups opposed to the present National Administration.

I have given this matter very serious consideration and cannot agree that the convention be composed of delegates elected to the '36 convention and representatives of certain other groups. Naturarlly, I have the highest respect and affection for the delegates to the '36 convention, but the proposed convention should not represent 1936 or any other era of the past. If we are to write a new platform that says what the Republican Party stands for today the only authority the convention could possibly have would be to have delegates selected in caucuses in every precinct in the country. The opportunity must be provided for the convention to represent every shade of opinion in the Republican Party, from Mr. Hoover, on one hand, to Mr. LaGuardia on the other.

I want you to know that I cannot support any other kind of convention than I have outlined above. I understand that most of those urging the convention are not thinking in these terms, and are all planning to limit the scope of action, both on issues and personnel.

Since you find so many of the Republican members of Congress are opposed to a convention, I do not believe this is an opportune time for even the kind of a convention I have outlined; but I must repeat that as far as I am concerned, if we are to have a convention, there must be no limitation on its scope of action, and its personnel must come from precinct caucuses or primaries.

Peace Seen Today In Strike at Milk Bottle Exchange

Settlement of yesterday's walkout of 16 employes of the Washington Milk Bottle Exchange probably will be completed this morning when the members of the Dairy Association board meet to discuss a proposed agreement.

Leaving the plant early yesterday morning, the striking workers demanded high wages and shorter hours. Led by James Kimbro, colored organizer for the American Federation of Labor and president of Local 82, Building Service Employes, with which the employes are affiliated, the strikers specifically asked for a 48-hour week and 45 cents per hour scale for all workers.

RooseveltBack; Sees LaGuardia En Route Here

President Knits His Liberal and Labor Ties in New York.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt returned to the Capital last night from a 12-day stay at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

Accompanying the Executive on his train trip from New York City were Postmaster General Farley and Harry L. Hopkins, WPA chief. Frank Walker, former director of the National Emergency Council, traveled with the party as far as Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—President Roosevelt conferred today with Fiorello H. LaGuardia, in a gesture widely interpreted as reaffirming his friendship with the liberal and labor groups which had a decisive part in the mayor's overwhelming victory Tuesday over the city Democratic machine.

His extraordinary talk with LaGuardia—a talk that involved his coming here from Hyde Park—was held as a public indication that the result of the election was in no sense displeasing to the White House.

"Social," LaGuardia Says.

The President and the mayor met in the Roosevelt town house—in which, incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt had not been for about a year—with Postmaster General James A. Farley.

As he left, LaGuardia said it was a "purely social call." Farley, who supported LaGuardia's Democratic opponent, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, in the campaign, had no comment. He accompanied the President on a late afternoon trip back to Washington.

On election night, Mr. Roosevelt was quick to congratulate the mayor, and his drive here to talk things over face to face gave no comfort to the sore and bruised Democratic organization.

The American Labor Party, which turned in around 450,000 votes for LaGuardia, supplying the added punch needed utterly to rout Tammany Hall and the other Democratic organizations, was formed only a year ago to aid the President himself in the 1936 election. It polled more than 200,000 votes for him here.

Laborites Back Roosevelt.

Thus his appearance here so soon after the election in friendly talk with LaGuardia was taken as a demonstration that Presidential regard for that party and similar groups had not been shaken.

The American Labor Party, with a membership of Committee for Industrial Organization and American Federation of Labor unionists, already has gone to some pains to make certain that the President did not regard its support of LaGuardia against a Democrat as meaning any lessened affection for the head Democrat of them all.

Later, Farley revealed that he joined the President and Mayor LaGuardia after they had been in conference for 10 or 15 minutes.

"Frankly, nothing went on while I was there," Farley said. "It was just a pleasant discussion."

Only last night, Alex Rose, the party's State secretary, wired the President that he "resented" any implication that the people of New York City had "repudiated the New Deal."

"The American Labor Party," he added, "is still its staunchest adherent."

Danzig's Nazi Flag To Bear City Crest

Free City of Danzig, Nov. 4 (AP).—Albert Forster, Nazi district leader, announced today that the old crest of the Free City of Danzig would be retained in the upper left-hand corner of a planned Danzig swastika flag.

Forster caused a stir November 1 by declaring that "the time will come soon when the flag of the Third Reich will be the state flag also of the Free City of Danzig."

He said he made the announcement that the Danzig crest would be returned to clear up "misunderstandings" in the foreign press which followed his November 1 statement.

Reform Moves Urged for U. S. Manufacturers

Committee Advises New Efficiency and High Ethical Standards.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 4.—A declaration of principles described as "a direct answer to those who challenge industry to put its own house in order" was made public today by the committee on industrial practices of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The report, which was approved by the board of directors of the association, will be submitted for adoption by the Congress of American industry, to be held here early in December.

Urges High Ethics.

"It is the obligation of every industrial enterprise to survey its business practices, to analyze points of weakness and points of strength, to demonstrate its capacity for change where necessary, and to adopt and maintain high ethical standards in all its operations," the report said.

Asserting that private enterprise is endangered, the report continued:

"The American private enterprise system, founded on the theory that individuals are different in ability and accomplishment; based in practice on the principles of private property and special reward for special achievement, is threatened.

Would Inform Public.

"To a greater and greater degree a constant and deliberate effort is being made to supersede private enterprise with vast State controls which, progressively continued, ultimately will emerge as state socialism."

The committee recommended that private enterprise and private property demonstrate their worth to the public and the desirability of their perpetuation by:

"1. Informing the public as to the accomplishments of the American private enterprise system.

"2. Exposing to the public the fallacies of proposals to abolish or cripple the American private enterprise system.

"3. Adherence by all busines to well tested and high principles of conduct."

Tear Gas, Clubs Used In Arrest of 51 Pickets

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 4 (AP).—Police used clubs and tear gas to arrest 51 men and women pickets today at two laundries, on resumption of a strike called by C. I. O. leaders October 12. No injuries were reported. City Attorney Al Tuxhorn said the prisoners probably would be charged with mass picketing. A previous order restricted pickets to three persons at a plant.

Fire Extinguisher Racket Broken Up, D. C. Police Claim

Police believed last night they had broken up the "fire extinguisher racket."

They held John O. Lea, 42, of 808 Sixth street northwest, who was charged with the larceny of fire extinguishers. Lea was arrested by Detective William Fawcett. Officials meantime tried to link Lea with the disappearance of between 50 and 100 fire extinguishers.

Detectives said that the extinguisher thief had memorized rules concerning fire regulations. He then prowled around apartment houses and stores, looking for the extinguishers. Next step, police said, was to go back and call on landlord or proprietors. The man told them, according to police, that they were violating the fire ordinances, and proved it in the rule book.

"But I'm a fire extinguisher salesman, and I can fix you up and nobody will know about it," the man would say, according to police.

He stole fire extinguishers from other buildings and sold them to his victims, police charged.

H.H. Breckenridge, Artist, 67, Is Dead

Philadelphia, Nov. 4. (AP).—Hugh H. Breckenridge, well known artist, died suddenly today, a few minutes after he had called on his physician. He was 67. He was born at Leesburg, Va.

His paintings hang in collections at the Philadelphia Art Club, the Delgado Museum of Art at New Orleans, San Francisco Museum of Art, University Club of Indianapolis and elsewhere. His work is chiefly landscapes, but he painted a number of portraits.

He also directed the Breckenridge School of Painting at East Gloucester, Mass.

Firing for Disease Stirs Strike Threat

Newark, N. J., Nov. 4 (AP).—A. C. I. O. union threatened today to strike rather than sign a contract under which the employer would have the right to discharge workers suffering from diabetes or venereal disease.

The contract proposed by the Mode Novelty Co. to the United Used Products Local Industrial Union, No. 132, called for a closed shop, recognition of the C. I. O. as exclusive bargaining agent, minimum wages and other features agreeable to the union.

But when the firm sought to include the right to demand a health certificate stating the employe was free of diabetes or venereal disease, and the right to discharge those so affected, the union balked.

Hazen Invites U. S. Inquiry on TrainingSchool

Would Welcome Hearing on Causes of Riots; Palmisano in Favor.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday stated that the District heads will welcome any investigation of the National Training School for Girls that the House District Committee may order.

The proposed investigation was virtually assured by Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee yesterday when he stated that he would support the proposal of Representative Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland, that such an inquiry be conducted.

"Where there's smoke, there must be fire," he said, "and if the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare can't find it, maybe our committee can."

Chairman Palmisano also declared that he would be ready to appoint a special sub-committee, if necessary, to probe the situation.

It is understood that the inquiry would be asked for early in the special Congressional session.

Palmisano said:

"I have never approved of many of the Congressional investigations in the past, but I believe in this particular case an inquiry might bring to light the cause of the riots among the girls at the institution and lead to the adoption of a program that will restore and maintain peace in the school."

He would not, however, wish to see the inmates appear at a public hearing.

"If it becomes necessary to seek information from the inmates," he stated, "the investigating sub-committee should go to the school and spare the girls the humiliation of apeparing in public."

One Hurt as $8,000 Fire Wrecks Truck, Home

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 4.—An explosion of gasoline started a fire that destroyed the combination dwelling and fruit stand of Philip Fisher, near St. Thomas, and burned an oil truck, causing damage estimated at $8,000.

The fire started as the truck was discharging gasoline into underground tanks at the Fisher establishment. W. O. Bingham, who was standing on the porch of the fruit stand, was knocked down by the force of the explosion and was slightly burned.

DrugClerkKills Self as Home YieldsMailLoot

$6,000 Taken in Holdup Found Hidden Under His House.

Los Angeles, Nov. 4 (AP).—Nine hours after a Government mail truck had been held up, O. Leroy Richardson, 38-year-old drug store employe, took his own life today and authorities recovered $6,000 in registered mail from his home.

Held as a suspect in the robbery was Frank E. Chase, 36. Lieut. Ray Bergh, of the Los Angeles County sheriff's office, said Chase's automobile was identied by Earl R. Irwin, driver of the postal service truck.

Lieut. Bergh said Richardson shot himself as he stood outside the office of an attorney while police sought him. All but one of the registered mail packages was recovered from under Richardson's house.

The mail truck was held up in Southside Los Angeles last night. Irwin said his truck was forced to the curb by two men in a sedan after he had picked up registered mail from outlying substations.

"This is a stickup. Give me that bag," one of the men ordered.

After he handed over the registered mail, Irwin telephoned police, giving a license number which authorities said was registered to Mrs. Elsie Chase, wife of the suspect held.

Chase denied knowledge of the holdup. He told authorities he had just dropped a friend, Richardson, at his place of employment. Richardson could not be found at the drug store, and a search of his home produced the stolen mail—except for one package—wrapped in a raincoat that had been thrown under the house.

As Lieut. Berch and his men left Richardson's house the suicide report was broadcast over the police radio. They rushed to the attorney's office and found Richardson's body in the hallway, a pistol in his hand and two bullet wounds over his heart.

High Court Weighs 'StorkDerby'Will

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (Canadian Press). Canada's supreme court today reserved decision on the "stork derby" will of the eccentric bachelor-millionaire Charles Millar.

The court had been asked for a final ruling on Millar's bequest of the residue of his estate, estimated at about $800,000, to the Toronto mother who gave birth to the most babies in the ten years following the millionaire's death. I. F. Hellmuth, counsel for Millar's next of kin, argued the bequest was invalid because it was contrary to public policy.

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Thirty-year-old James Cox Brady, whose father, the late James Cox Brady, sr., helped persuade Walter P. Chrysler to create a new automobile enterprise over the feeble assets of the wobbly Maxwell Motor Corporation, has been elected a director of Chrysler Corporation, the company announced today.

'Chute Drops Flier Head Downward 5,000 Feet; Lives

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 4 (AP).—Aviation Cadet L. I. Brannon, of Auburn, Wash., received only a broken arm when he dangled head downward during a 5,000-foot parachute drop, Navy officials said today. The unscheduled jump was made Tuesday when two planes collided during formation practice. Brannon's foot fouled the 'chute when he leaped.

'No Angel' Is Plea For Poison Blonde

Cincinnati, Nov. 4 (AP).—The murder trial of Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn moved to within a few hours of jury deliberation tonight, with the blonde defendant pictured by her defense counsel as "no angel," and by the prosecution as the perpetrator of a "cycle of deaths."

"I make no contention that Mrs. Hahn is an angel or a righteous woman," declared Defense Attorney Joseph H. Hoodin in his final argument, "but there's a difference between stealing and running around with men . . . and first-degree murder."

Prosecutor Dudley Miller Outcalt, completing about half of his allotted five hours, reviewed the death by poison of Jacob Wagner, 78, with which she is charged, three others which have entered the case and the illness of George Heis, another elderly acquaintance.

Utilities Facing 10 Billion Rise, Bankers Told

Administration Spokesman Appeals for Support of Regulatory Laws.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 4—The prospect that security underwriters may be called upon to finance some $10,000,000,000 in public utility requirements in the next few years was put before the annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association today.

The bankers, who are seeking means of reopening the gates to new capital through issuance of securities, temporarily retarded by the slump in the stock and bond markets, heard an appeal for support of utility regulation by an Administration spokesman and complaint by a power company president that some of the Government controls were unnecessarily drastic.

Frank R. McNinch, former chairman of the Federal Power Commission, said:

Appeals for Support.

"I appeal to you, whose advice is very often the determining factor in the investment of large sums of money by the people of this country, to give your active support to regulatory legislation and to give your constructive help and co-operation toward overcoming the deefatist attitude of some utility executives."

Alex Dow, white-whiskered 76-year-old president of the Detroit Edison Co., said he differed with McNinch more in degree than in direction, but turned his fire upon the public utility holding company act, saying:

"Why wipe out a whole class of structures honest and otherwise, to permit control, or possibly punishment of some offenders? I give it up."

Praises U. S. Control.

McNinch recited detailed statistics to show that the utility industry was prospering under Government control, and held up the public utility act of 1935 as "a bulkark of strength in the power industry" which had restored confidence of investors, and which should facilitate financing.

In an interview after his address, McNinch estimated that on the basis of the present rate of gain in power consumption the industry would require $7,500,000,000 in new capital expenditures for expansion in the next five years.

In addition, it was recalled that only last week the committee of Public Utility executives issued in Washington a statement that in recent years there had accumulated deferred normal expenditures of some $2,600,000,000 because of the Administration's "fixed punitive policy toward the industry."

Scoops and Indignant Readers Fail to Bother One Editor Here

'Postal Bulletin' Worries Not About News and Make-Up But Effectively Serves Postoffices With Latest Departmental Data.

One daily newspaper whose editors never worry about being scooped, and get no letters from indignant subscribers or visits from press agents, is the "Postal Bulletin," published here five days a week.

It is a paper without serious make-up problems. If the news coverage requires ten pages the Bulletin appears in ten pages. Sometimes there is only one page. If the copy available fills only half a page, there is no scramble for "fillers." The rest of the page is left blank.

Nevertheless, the "Bulletin" has its "big stories" other than routine news about appointments, changes in railway mail schedules and changes in postoffice sites. These are the announcements appearing under the signatures of the postmaster general, the first, second, third and fourth assistant postmasters general the solicitor, and acting solicitor. They relate to such matters as amendments to the postal regulations, instructions about paying postal money orders, lists of stolen money order concerns and the names of persons or concerns against whom fraud orders have been issued.

Where these instructions affect more than one division of the service, "rewrite" becomes a factor, and the language of the notice is revised until it satisfies all concerned.

The office of Chief Clerk Owen A. Keen serves as the "city desk." There material sent from the various branches of the service is scrambled for press.

It is sent downstairs to be looked over by the department's printing clerk, who may give some instructions concerning make-up. Then it goes by messenger to the Government Printing Office.

"Deadline" on copy is 11:30 a. m., though in the case of something very important it can be stretched, Keen said. The nearest equivalent to editorials are the occasional exhortations to postmasters to "make every reasonable effort to rent more lock boxes."

Alton P. Tisdel, superintendent of documents, serves as the "business and circulation" departments. The "Bulletin" circulates without charge among higher officials in the service, down to and including all Presidential postmasters.

Loans to Regain World's Farm Market Asked

Grants at Current Prices Would Encourage Exports, Leaders Assert.

By the Associated Press.

Leaders in the powerful House Committee on Agriculture said yesterday they would favor a new loan-subsidy program to "reacapture the world market" for American farm products.

It is intended, they said, that future loans on commodities be made at figures equivalent to the world prices of the commodities. The difference between that and a domestic price level would be made up in subsidies paid to farmers from processing taxes, plus benefits for "conserving soil."

In the past, loans have been made higher than world prices. But the legislators opposed future programs of this kind, saying that when the Government lends more money on a product than it would fetch in world markets, exports are discouraged because the farmer tends to take the loan and store his product in Government warehouses as security.

The newly authorized corn loan of 44 to 50 cents a bushel was cited as an example of keeping loans in line with "going prices."

"Had the loan been 60 cents as proposed by some farm interests," said Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, "we might have insured a domestic price level but we would have cut off all chance of export.

"There are two things we want to avoid—Government accumulation of high priced commodities and the impounding of crop surpluses in this country.

"If farmers can get loans at world price levels enough will take them to prevent demoralization of the market and enough will sell to keep supplies moving."

Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, said a desirable course would be an effort to secure fair prices in the domestic market and at the same time permit farmers to produce all that can be absorbed both in this country and abroad.

Champion Husks 1,497 Lbs. of Corn In 80 Minutes

Weber Farm, Marshall, Mo., Nov. 4 (U.P.).—Minnesota's Ray Hanson, who farms 400 acres in Cottonwood County, picked and shucked 1,497 pounds of corn in 80 minutes today to win agriculture's world series—the National Corn Husking championship.

It was one of the lowest marks ever made in the tournament, which this year drew more than 100,000 spectators. Hanson, 38, one of the oldest contestants in the field of 20 that picked in a rain-swept cornfield, drew heavy penalties because of the wet shucks clinging to the ears he banged into his wagon in the contest.

Cecil Vining, 29, of Baldwin, Kans., was second.

Bonaparte Place Sold.

Mount Holly, N. J., Nov. 4 (A.P.).—The 282-acre estate of Harris Hammond at Bordentown, remnant of a 1,000-acre showplace once owned by Joseph Bonaparte, exiled King of Spain and brother to Emperor Napoleon, was sold for $200 today at a sheriff's sale.

Contract Bridge

Honor Covering

To many players the question of whether or not to cover an honor with an honor brings up the shade of Hamlet and his "To be or not to be." Actually, the problem is not nearly so abstruse. Honor covering, or vice versa, requires only one faculty, and that is the faculty of visualization. Let us consider the following very simple hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 10 4 2 ♡ 9 6 2 ◇ Q 8 ♣ Q J 9
♠ 6 5 ♡ K Q J 3 ◇ J 7 5 4 ♣ 10 8 6	North West East South	♠ 7 ♡ A 10 5 ◇ 10 9 6 3 2 ♣ K 5 3 2
	♠ A K 9 8 2 ♡ 8 7 4 ◇ A K ♣ A 7 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

East-West collects three heart tricks before the declarer can get in. After that declarer takes the lead with a diamond and draws trump. His problem is now a simple one—must he, or must he not, concede a club trick? Disregarding all the other suits, let us examine the club situation. Aside from unimportant small clubs declarer lacks the King and ten. Unless these key cards are placed miraculously, one club trick must be lost—unless the opponents with rare altruism cooperate. As the East-West cards are actually placed, if declarer leads the club Queen from dummy and East obliges with a cover, the Ace wins, and West's ten is subject to a simple finesse. If East is not so naive, the jig is up. The Queen holds, of course. But, now, what can declarer do? If he leads the Jack, East covers, and West's ten becomes a third round trick; if declarer leads the nine, he must go up with the Ace anyway or lose on the spot to the ten.

Thus, transferring the problem to the defenders' side of the table, it should easily be seen that when dummy holds any such combination as the one shown, East, the player sitting directly over dummy, should not cover the first honor led but should most decidely cover the second one.

Hazen Inspects K Street Project Replacing Slum

Modern-Type Residences to Fill Needs of Larger Families.

Led by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, acting in his capacity as chairman of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, a small group yesterday inspected a 16-dwelling slum clearance project which the A. D. A. is building in the 600 block of K street southwest.

In the party were John Ihlder, executive officer of the Authority; Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, president, and Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, secretary, of the Washington Housing Association, and Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association.

They saw in process of construction two-story dwellings of four, five and six rooms each. Each will have fully equipped bathroom and kitchen, utility room, service yard and insulation against heat and cold.

The houses front on a wide central space, opening to K street, which will be sodded and planted with shade trees. Six-room units were included to provide for larger families that have difficulty in finding accommodations.

"It is expected," said Ihlder, "that the houses will be ready for occupancy in January and applications already are being made, though rents have not been determined definitely. As with its other housing projects, the Authority bases rents upon a 3 per cent return upon capital invested."

The development is convenient to the street car barns, Government office buildings south of the Mall and the proposed site for the new Jefferson Junior High School.

Law Repudiated, 2,500 Miners Quit

Hazleton, Pa., Nov. 4 (AP).—More than 2,500 anthracite miners were on strike tonight at five collieries of the Glen-Alden Coal Co.

The men, members of the United Mine Workers of America, walked out after the company issued notices that it had repudiated the new State workmen's compensation act, as it has a right to do under the act. Other major operators declared recently that they would reject the law that becomes effective January 1.

Under the new compensation law, if it is rejected by employers, rejected employes may start legal action for compensation in industrial accidents.

A Rose Is a Rose, the Adage Goes; What of Its Odor? Nobody Knows

Fragrance of Petals Blows Talcum Powder From Surface of Mercury, French Scientist Finds, Thus Proving . . .?

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—A clew to what happens to the odor of a rose was described to the Symposium on Biophysics here tonight by Dr. Irving Langmuir, of Schnectady, N. Y., Nobel Prize winner in physics.

The experiment, he said, was done by Dr. Henri Devaux, of Paris. A little mercury was allowed to spread into a small pool. Its surface was "scraped" chemically clean. Talcum powder was sprinkled on top of the mercury.

Then a rose petal was held over the talc surface, without touching The talc moved away on all sides, from directly under the rose petal, to collect around the edges of the pool.

It was moved, said Dr. Langmuir, by the odor of the rose, which fell on the mercury surface and spread itself in a smooth layer. This layer of rose odor was invisible and could not be smelled.

But its presence was proved, said Dr. Langmuir, by taking two glass rods and carefully pushing sides of the invisible layer of "smell" together.

When this was done, some of the odor rose from the mercury surface and could be smelled. This showed, said Dr. Langmuir, the molecules of rose odor lay on the mercury in a layer one molecule thick, but with the layer of odor became thicker part of it rose again into the air.

Dewey Indicts Foe's Client for Racket Slaying

Mr. Dewey going to bed with this on his mind—if he has a conscience."

He repeated that Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., had not asked for his resignation, but that he had tendered it out of a feeling that the State's chief law officer should not be "sullied" by the "venomous" and "false" statements made about a member of his staff.

"I don't think anyone should become the victim of blatant, inane talk for political effect," he said.

Dewey, who will take office January 1 as the first non-Tammany district attorney in more than two decades, said the indictment against Goldis, charging him with the murder on September 13, 1934, of William Snyder, a local union chief, was voted by the grand jury three weeks ago. It was witheld for reasons of political propriety until after the campaign was ended, he said.

Goldis, accused of being the gunman who was hired to shoot Snyder in the back during a meeting of flour truckmen in a lower East Side restaurant, has been held as a material witness for the last three months. He will be arraigned tomorrow.

Scientists Deny Protoplasm Is Source of Life

Dead Particles Compose It; Mechanism of Death in Its Structure.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—One of the main concepts of science, the "living protoplasm" which for nearly 100 years has been thought the source of life, was declared to have no real existence today.

Instead, a group of America's foremost scientists showed, "protoplasm" is made of numerous, commonplace particles, visible by up-to-date methods. Not one of these particles is alive.

One mechanism of death, of which the public hasn't heard, has been found in study of these particles. The new viewpoints were given at a symposium on biophysics, in which for the first time in the United States, physicists, the men who study atoms, got together with biologists, who study the living "systems" which result when atoms get together.

Named From the Greek.

The symposium was held at the University of Pennsylvania under joint auspices of the American Institute of Physics and the Eldridge Reeves Johnson Foundation for Medical Physics.

"Protoplasm" is the sticky, usually whitish substance of which living parts seem to be made. It was so named in 1840 from the Greek, protos, first, and plasma, a thing formed, and means "the first creation."

Dr. E. Newton Harvey, of Princeton University, told how under the microscope, the whirling centrifuge and fine testing methods, "protoplasm" has literally fallen apart. It is made of cells, bits of fat, granules of colored matter, proteins, threads, hollow bubbles, "nuclei," salts and a complex of other things.

Indispensable for Life.

"No one of these substances," he said, "can be considered as 'living' except insofar as it is indispensable for the continuance of life."

On this view, he added, even the salts or indispensable to life.

One of the newer mysteries is how htese particles get together in "cells" without having a "bag," or covering, to hold them together. Dr. Harvey told of measurements indicating that nothing much except a "surface tension" of its exterior keeps the living cell together. This tension is unbelievably slight.

The mechanism of death was found in this peculiar surface by Dr. M. H. Jacobs, of the University of Pennsylvania and the Marine Biological Laboratory, Woods Hole, Mass.

He explained that every instant "food" and oxygen is passing through these mysterious cell walls. But the process, called "diffusion," he said is a paradox.

"In the last analysis," he explained, "diffusion is diametrically opposed to all that is most characteristic of life. By nature diffusion processes are essentially destructive."

They appear at their maximum after death. Yet in life they serve to maintain what Dr. Jacobs said is the "incredibly improbable" arrangement of the particles forming a living cell.

I. C. C. Extends Trucking Zone 11 Mi. From City

Operations in Virginia and Maryland Sections to Be Considered Local.

Washington moved another step toward establishment of a definite boundary line for the so-called metropolitan area yesterday when the Interstate Commerce Commission defined zones within 11 miles of the District where trucking concerns and bus companies will be exempt from major provisions of the motor carriers act, including rate fixing.

Incorporating sections of nearby Maryland and Virginia, the exemption zone will become effective November 25. Public transportation activities within the new area, it was ruled, will be considered as purely local operations and only hours of service and safety provisions of the act will apply.

The I. C. C. order extends the metropolitan area to Alexandria and Arlington County, Va., and to a line in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties Md., approximately 11 miles from the zero milestone in Potomac Park.

Others Require I. C. C. License.

Vehicles for hire operating beyond the new zone must secure operating permits from the I. C. C. and will be required to file tariffs and carry identification plates from the I. C. C. motor vehicle bureau.

The law applies only in cases where deliveries are made by contract or common carrier truck.

The zone includes Kensington and Garrett Park, Md., and the Chillum, Riverdale, Hyattsville, Bladensburg, Seat Pleasant, and Spalding districts of Prince Georges County, Md.

Line Laid Out.

It includes also that part of Montgomery County, Md., east of a line extending northward from the Potomac River to the intersection of Conduit road and Seven Locks road and thence northward along Seven Locks road to the intersection with Weaver road, and south of the line extending eastward along Weaver road from the intersection with Seven Locks road to Orndorf Mill road, thence eastward along Orndorf Mill road to Old Georgetown road, thence southeastward along Old Georgetown road to Grosvenor lane, thence eastward along Grosvenor lane to U. S. Highway 240, thence northward along U. S. Highway 240 to Garrett Park road, thence eastward along Garrett Park road to Wheaton road, thence northeastward along Wheaton road to Old Bladensburg road, thence southeastward along Old Bladensburg road to the Montgomery County-Prince Georges County line.

The commission ruled Gaithersburg, Olney, Rockville, Laurel, Bowie and Marlboro, Md., and Fairfax, Falls Church and Mount Vernon, Va., are not sufficiently adjacent to Washington to be considered within the Washintgon commercial zone for the purpose of applying the exemption.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

By Scott Hart.

Dangling

That vast group of Federal employes who are left dangling without benefit of the civil service retirement system or the social security boon should be seriously considered in any plans for the liberalization of the retirement laws by the forthcoming special and later regular sessions of Congress.

The president of the American Federation of Government Employes is optimistic over the chances of improvement of the retirement laws, particularly the optional retirement phases, since the Civil Service Commission favors a bill for optional 30-year retirement at the age of 60, and Government employe groups are pressing for similar legislation, though not all are in accord with the commission's bill in detail.

The chief objection of some of these groups is that the option may be exercised either by the employe or the Government. "I feel, however, that it is most urgent that something be done for Government employes who do not come under the civil service system, and I can assure you that the A. F. G. E. will fight to bring them under it," President Stengle stated.

"Either the retirement law should be extended to cover all Government employes or those employes not now in the classified civil service should be brought under it at once, in which case they would automatically benefit from retirement," he stated. "So far as retirement is concerned, the same result would be achieved in either case, but in view of the unquestioned desirability of classification and the merit system, the A. F. G. E. will support and work for the achievement of the most inclusive retirement benefits possible, and also for extension of classification and of the merit system."

Flashbacks

Some flashbacks from the dinner tendered G. Carroll Dimond by A. G. O. Lodge, No. 2: At the speakers' table were somewhat the same people as spoke in tribute last week to James G. Yaden: Stengle, Graves, Bain, Schaefer, Hoffman and others. The turn-out for Dimond was bigger than the banquet hall, some people having hard times finding chairs . . . The music was good; so was the chicken a la king and the pumpkin pie . . . McGinnis makes a good master of ceremonies and Yaden a good toastmaster, as always . . . "There has never been a more courageous man in the federation; I have envied his devotion"—Stengle of Dimond . . . "Show your appreciation of his services by turning in more memberships"—Stengle . . . And then the A. F. G. E. president envisaged what might be an embarrassing situation for him: Suppose, he said, that while he labors on Capitol Hill some Representative should ask him: "Whom do you represent?" and he would answer: "The A. F. G. E." . . . and the Representative would inquire: "How many members have you?" To which Stengle would reply: "Some 25,000" . . . The Representative would say: "Aren't there over 100,000 in Washington? Where are the others?" . . . An increased membership could forestall such an embarrassing moment, and also give weight to the federation's activities, he said.

Edgar W. Smith, vice president, General Motors Export Corporation, speaks before the Department of Agriculture class in administrative management at 5 this afternoon in the South Building Auditorium. More than 300 executives and employes of Federal departments are attending the administrative lectures. Peter Keplinger, chief, division of personnel management, Forestry Service, is in charge.

Dr. Holden Leaves Estate of $75,000

An estate of approximately $75,000 was left by Dr. Raymond T. Holden, 77, who died at his home, 3111 Sixteenth street northwest, last month after having practiced medicine more than half a century.

His widow, Mrs. Celeste S. Holden, filed a petition for the probate of his will through the law firm of Hogan, Donovan, Jones, Hartson and Guider. The estate, it was shown, consisted of $22,000 in cash and securities and real estate holdings.

Mrs. Holden was named sole beneficiary, the will suggesting that she provide for Dr. Holden's sister, Miss Elizabeth Holden, for life.

Opal Traced to Ancient Aztecs

New York, Nov. 5.—So enhanced by historical associations that its value as a museum piece far exceeds its great intrinsic worth, a 32-carat opal has recently been described as "the most beautiful Mexican opal I have ever seen" by Herbert L. Whitlock, curator of gems and minerals at the American Museum of Natural History.

First of the rulers of early Mexico who is supposed to have worn the gem is Montezuma. The earlier history of the gem indicates that it was the emblem of the aristocratic military Order of the Eagle, of which Montezuma was the head.

The opal, exhibiting an infinite series of prismatic colors from a pale lavender purple to deep ruby red, is believed to have been carved by Mexican Indian lapidaries before the Spanish conquest, the method of cutting and the use of natural contours of the stone bearing out this point.

The opal was found during excavations along the line of the causeway which in Aztec times crossed a now partially drained lake. It was thought to have been thrown in the lake during a religious ceremony, where it remained until found in 1863.

$730,000 Diamond Shipped for 64c

New York, N. Y.—Rewarding 62-year-old Jacobus Jonker, South African farmer, with $315,000, and purchased in the rough by a New York firm for $750,000, the world-famous Jonkers diamond was shipped from London to New York via registered United States mail for 67 cents postage, it was learned recently. According to the owners of the huge diamond, the postal service was considered the safest means of transportation due to the lack of publicity it ordinarily receives.

Experts have pronounced the Jonkers diamond one of the rarest blue colored gems known to man. When found, bidders from all over the world competed for the gem. It was finally cut into 12 perfect diamonds, practically priceless in value!

Algic's Seamen Ordered Held For Grand Jury

Attorney for C. I. O. Gets Manslaughter Warrants for 2 Officers.

ordered Capt. Joseph Gainard to put the seamen in irons unless they obeyed orders.

Commissioner Cullen, in ordering the 14 seamen held, said:

"I do not find the conduct of you men grave in any way, but there is evidence of your insubordination. I therefore find you, under the law, subject to the criminal statute for willful neglect of duty and disobedience of your master's orders."

In default of bail, fixed at $500 each, the seamen went back to jail.

Commissioner Cullen said he was doubtful that he had legal power to issue the warrants, but signed them after consulting legal authorities.

At the hearing Cullen told the seamen that he did not find they had been involved in a "revolt to mutiny within the common meaning of those terms." He pointed out, however, that insubordination would render them liable to a maximum prison term of ten years, should they be convicted.

Cullen declared that he recognized the right of collective bargaining to be "as complete as any right the master might have." He added, however:

"Of course it should be exercised only under proper conditions and at the right time."

A Disastrous Voyage.

The previous cruise of the Algic, during which the alleged "mutiny" occurred, was punctuated by a murder, a drowning, four desertions and three sit-down strikes. Three of the four alleged deserters, Clegg Lowder, James O. Lampkin and Robert Stewart, now working their way homeward, are also charged in a Federal warrant with violation of the mutiny laws.

Lowder, Lampkin and Stewart are said to have left the Algic shortly after the episode at Montevideo. The other alleged deserter is John Hartley. He joined the Algic's crew at Jacksonville, replacing Able Seaman John Burgess, who was murdered in a brawl on the waterfront there. Hartley is said to have "jumped ship" at Jacksonville on the return voyage.

In Washington Green said:

"The policies of the National Maritime Commission and its chairman, Joseph P. Kennedy, to build a merchant marine of which our Nation could be justly proud and to establish stable labor conditions in connection therewith is wholeheartedly supported by the American Federation of Labor. All contracts negotiated and entered into between the management of steamship lines and seamen's unions must and should be religiously observed.

"We believe the policies of Mr. Kennedy, chairman of the National Maritime Commission, which have for their purpose the rehabilitation of the American merchant marine, are sound and should be given national support. The demand of certain irresponsible self-constituted leaders in the maritime industry that Mr. Kennedy be deposed because he favors discipline at sea should not be seriously considered."

"Strikes in foreign ports in violation of existing agreements entered into between the management of steamship companies and seamen's unions should be avoided at any cost," he said.

"If ringleaders among the seamen were actually endeavoring to incite mutiny, efforts by the country to prevent or punish such mutiny ought to be supported by all right-thinking American seamen . . ."

"Such action," Green said in reference to the Algic incident, "must be avoided if America is to create and maintain a merchant marine worthy of that name."

He said: "The American Federation of Labor is taking steps to provide a strong seamen's union for all American seamen who desire to protect their rights through organized effort. The American Federation of Labor offers an opportunity to seamen to unite in a responsible organization for the purpose of engaging in collective bargaining under the banner and supervision of the American Federation of Labor. This union of seamen, built and established by the American Federation of Labor will be made up of all classes of seamen, comprising sailors, firemen, stewards and other help."

As a Matter of Procedure

Sir Ronald Lindsay leaving the State Department yesterday after a conference which presumably had to do with procedure to be followed when the duke and duchess visit here. At the same time, it was announced that the Duchess of Windsor would not be accorded royal rank here, following procedure of the British government in denying to the American-born wife of the abdicated king the same rank which the duke holds as a member of the royal family.

Gorman, Green Join in Blast at Bedaux System

Leaders of Warring Factions Condemn 'Stretch-out' Labor Efficiency.

Francis J. Gorman, president of the United Textile Workers, a C. I. O. union, last night joined with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in criticism of Charles E. Bedaux as personal representative of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor on their forthcoming tour of the United States.

"Bedeaux," Gorman said, "has made his money from the sweat of the textile workers. He will always stand out in the minds of 1,250 textile workers as the father of the most completely exhausting inhuman efficiency system ever invented."

Earlier in the day Green, commenting on the action of the Baltimore Federation of Labor in condemning and warning labor against the proposed tour of the duke and duchess, said:

attitude of American labor."

"Labor," he added, "is not opposed to the former king, but it is opposed to the 'stretchout.'"

The "stretchout" system is an efficiency system perfected by Bedaux and used in many branches of industry in the United States and abroad. It is based on a scheme of production units, termed "B units," determined by the observation of a worker in the completion of a given task.

An operation normally requiring an hour, for example, is established at 60 "B units." A worker who can accomplish the job in 40 minutes, or 40 "B units," is credited with having saved 20 units and receives increased pay in proportion to the unit saved. In other words, if the worker completing the task in 60 minutes received 60 cents, the one who completed it in 40 minutes would receive 80 cents. However, a worker who took 80 minutes for the job still would receive the basic 60 cents an hour.

Windsors May Cancel U.S. Trip Because of Attack on Bedaux of us may become sick. Some of us may be displeased. Out of 100 chances for the trip, 90 are gone."

Bedaux talked with the duke by transatlantic telephone yesterday morning and reported he was "very gay" over his prospective visit and that the tour would go forward as planned. Simultaneously newspapers prominently displayed dispatches telling of the Baltimore federation's action.

"I believe," said Green, "that the resolution typifies the attitude of labor toward the Bedaux system."

Bedaux came in for much scathing comment. He said he told the duke he would be glad to step down as the royal couple's American guide if the criticism caused them embarrassment, but that the former monarch insisted he remain.

"He also advised me to pay no attention to those low accusations," the dapper French-American efficiency engineer said, referring to other dispatches which intimated he is a Fascist sympathizer.

He said Reichsfuehrer Hitler had him ejected from Germany four years ago.

He admitted it was with reluctance he offered to step aside as the royal couple's guide.

"No one has worked harder to make this trip a success than I," he said glumly.

Bedaux, who began his American career as a subway "sand hog" at a few dollars a day and is now a multi-millionaire, sheltered the duke at his chateau in France after the former monarch's abdication "for the woman I love." He has arranged the couple's itinerary which includes a White House luncheon November 12 and a dinner at the British Embassy.

Duke Is Undecided.

By the United Press.

Paris (Friday), Nov. 5.—The Duke of Windsor went to bed early today undecided whether to go through with his tour of the United States or cancel it because of bitter opposition in American labor circles to his friend, Charles E. Bedaux.

A spokesman for the duke said, "We have not changed our plans, which are to sail on the Bremen Saturday, but we will have to take cognizance of the situation when we see the morning press."

The duke may make his decision known between 9 a. m. and 10 a. m. today.

Efforts were made by members of the entourage of the duke and the American-born duchess, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, to reach Bedaux by telephone in New York.

When the report of the action of the Baltimore Federation of Labor reached Paris, friends of the duke and duchess said they were completely mystified by statements the American tour might be canceled.

In London, the Daily Mirror said today the Duke of Windsor's equerry, Dudley Forwood, said said there was "absolutely no truth" to the report the Windsors might cancel their tour.

"I do not know how this rumor originated," the Daily Mirror quoted Forwood as saying, "but there never has been any foundation for such a statement. I only returned from England today (the Daily Mirror said it had talked by telephone with Forwood, who was in Paris) after some days' leave, and I have been with his royal highness, so I can naturally deny the report."

The duke and duchess were entertained last night at a dinner at the United States Embassy. While it was said they had no information concerning Bedaux's statement in Washington, it was added they were apprehensive as to the reception they might receive in the United States.

Magill to Appear Before Committee Today; Vinson Refuses to Predict.

to be considered by the committee:

Relief for debt-ridden and deficit corporations.

New exemptions for companies having contracts not to pay dividends.

Assistance to financially weak concerns just coming out of reorganization or bankruptcy.

Further aid to small business enterprises seeking to expand.

Exemptions for plant improvements and extensions as an aid to business recovery.

Vinson emphasized that losses from modifications of some taxes must be made up by increases in others if the sub-committee is to fulfill its objective of revenues maintained at present levels. He saw little difficulty in picking up the necessary new revenue to offset losses.

For example, he has proposed in the past that income tax yields might be increased by employer withholding of taxes on employes' salary income, and payment direct to the Government.

40 Millions Extra Revenue.

Some experts estimate this would yield at least $40,000,000 additional revenue. In addition, the sub-committee will consider later on possible tax administrative changes and other more efficient collection methods.

Other tax items to be explored for possible revision up or down and elimination of inequities include estate and gift taxes, so-called nuisance taxes and advisability of requiring joint income taxes from husbands and wives living in eight "community property tax" States. Under present community property tax laws, some taxpayers in these States are able to enter the lower tax brackets by splitting of income and filing of separate returns by husband and wife.

Besides the sub-committee members, tax experts attending yesterday's conference included Magill, Arthur H. Kent, assistant general counsel of the Treasury; L. H. Parker, staff chief of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, and C. F. Stam, counsel for the committee.

Hurley Assails Profits Tax.

Boston, Nov. 4 (AP).—Gov. Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts today criticized the undistributed corporate profits tax as "discouraging industry from embarking on major expansion programs which might go far in relieving unemployment."

At the same time he suggested to a conference of New England Governors that requiring the same margin for the "long" and "short" sides of the stock market might help prevent such market disturbances as the September-October break.

Hurley called also for changes in the Securities Exchange Commission regulations.

Catholic U. Adds McNulty to Staff

George A. McNulty, senior attorney at the Securities and Exchange Commission, has become a member of the faculty of the Catholic University Law School, it was announced by the dean, Dr. Robert J. White.

Before coming to Washington McNulty practiced law in Missouri and taught at the St. Louis University Law School. He is a member of the Missouri bar, the Federal courts of that district and of the bar of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Simpson described her as "fond of artistic things. She has a knack about good foods and wine. She also shares with me a love of historical lore, especially about old boats, models and fighting frigates."

"Of course, she is wonderful with people, too—and anyway, I cannot describe her!" the News quoted Simpson as saying.

"I met her 13 years ago," the News quotes Simpson. "I was married then and living at Greenwich, Conn., with my first wife. Some mutual friends had us all to dinner.

"After that, we saw more of each other. You asked me what I consider her most striking quality—well, she has a perfectly marvelous disposition."

Simpson arrived here last Monday, saying he had come over to visit his mother and attend private business.

Hamilton Suggests Policy Committee as Landon Opposes Convention.

Massachusetts. "But I must repeat we are to have a convention, there must be no limitation on its scope of action, and its personnel must come from precinct caucuses or primaries."

Borah Opposes Plan.

Col. Frank Knox, running mate of Landon in 1936; Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Senator Townsend, of Delaware, head of the Republican senatorial committee, counseled delay. Expressions of forthright opposition came from Senator Borah, of Idaho, who contended the voters would have no part in the selection of delegates, and Representative Martin, who figured a national convention in 1938 would be a "major political blunder."

Committee members reflected the divergent opinions of the leaders. Most of those who commented were "undecided." They evinced great interest in these points stressed by Landon:

1. If an off-year convention is held, delegates should be selected in caucuses in "every precinct in the country."

2. Opportunity must be provided for representation of "every shade of opinion in the party, from Mr. Hoover on one hand, to Mr. LaGuardia on the other."

3. There must be a definite stand on farm, labor and unemployment legislation, the tariff and fiscal and financial policies, including the gold and silver purchase acts.

4. It must represent the "hearts, convictions and enthusiasm" of the rank and file of all groups opposed to the National Administration.

Representative Martin expressed the opinion the plan espoused by Hoover and recently supported by Hamilton would not be approved after Landon's message was made public.

Col. Knox suggested that a "widely representative and highly competent" policy committee be named and, if it drafted a generally acceptable statement of principles, the national committee could decide later on the feasibility of a convention before next year's Congressional elections.

Committeeman Harrison E. Spangler, of Iowa, one of the leading proponents of a convention, predicted a definite showdown on the question at the meeting tomorrow.

Committee Is First Issue.

He said, however, the convention issue was secondary to the naming of a policy committee inasmuch as a platform would have to be shaped before any convention could act upon it.

Hoover, in outlining his proposal, has advocated "the creation of a committee of distinguished Republicans who will formulate a draft of fundamental principles to be submitted to a general conference of party leaders some time in the spring."

After perusing Landon's advice against recalling the 1936 delegates for the proposed 1938 convention, Spangler said the committee members never entertained such a thought. He suggested the established State committees determine how delegates should be elected in their territories.

"Every one of the many Republicans who had thought that we should have a conference has felt that it should speak for the rank and file of the party," Spangler said. "Any attempt to hand pick a small group would not be tolerated."

United Protest Meets Increase In Token Fare

U. F. W. A. and Citizens' Federation to Consider P. U. C. Action.

A storm of organized protest against the rise in streetcar fares was indicated yesterday by officials of the Federation of Citizens Associations and of the United Federal Workers of America, while Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman of a subcommittee of the House District Committee, said congressional investigation of the Capital Transit Co. would be resumed.

Meanwhile, many patrons of cars and buses expressed helpless resentment at the new rates.

The elevation of token fares from 7½ to 8 1-3 cents will be scrutinized at tomorrow night's meeting of the federation in the District Building, Thomas E. Lodge, president, said yesterday. Characterizing the results of the Public Utilities Commission investigation as "most unfortunate," Lodge declared he felt that the poor would suffer from the increase.

A special session of the civic affairs committee of the U. F. W. A. was called for tonight by its chairman, Sidney R. Katz, who termed the commission's decision an "outrage."

Lack of Representation Scored.

Delegates to the Northeast Conference of Citizens' Associations in Northeast Washington spoke bitterly last night of the absence of a people's counsel in sessions of the Public Utilities Commission.

"Our people feel," said William A. Driggers, conference secretary, "that they have lost their champion before the commission. We feel that if we had been represented there, maybe these new high fares wouldn't have gone into effect."

The last people's counsel was William A. Roberts, jr.

Under the regulations put into effect Wednesday midnight, tokens are being sold at the rate of six for 50 cents instead of at the old price of four for 30 cents. Tokens now are valid on practically all bus lines, and universal free transfers will be given for the first time in years.

The new rate, established after a 16-month investigation by the Public Utility Commission, is equaled in ten other cities of more than 200,000 population, it was stated in a tabulation prepared by the Capital Transit Co. Twenty cities have lower street car fares, although in some cases bus rates are higher. Only two municipalities, New York and San Francisco, have straight 5-cent fares. In five cities, including Baltimore, both street car and bus rates are higher, it was said.

$18,600 of Tokens Sold.

Despite complaints from early morning to late last night by riders, traffic handled yesterday was not believed to have been lessened by the fare boost. One reason for sustained patronage was explained by a Transit Company official by the fact that on Wednesday just after the increase was announced, but before it had been put in effect, $18,600 of tokens were purchased. Tokens sales represented a 50 per cent increase above normal, company officials stated.

The company expects an eventual 6 to 8 per cent increase in number of tokens sold, but more than $250,000 added income.

Although company inspectors for the most part denied that they had heard many objections, passengers last night seemed to feel that "the public is getting a raw deal."

"You should have heard the girls talking about the rise in prices at luncheon today," said Mrs. E. Hamilton, clerk in a large downtown department store. "We're all upset about this; it means a lot to us. It many be cheaper now for a group of us to go to work together in a private car. I don't think the company ought to raise its rates, in view of the services it gives."

Rider Admits Helplessness.

"I don't like it, but what am I going to do?" asked Miss Catherine Murray.

"No other town in American would allow the street car company to run the kind of cars they have in use here," asserted Charles H. Oldham, custom tailor. "I use a pass, so the increase doesn't mean anything to me. I think the change in rates in intended to sell more passes."

"I may start using a taxicab now," complained Miss Vida Lee Porter, a teacher. "The increase isn't justified."

Frank Hyson, a colored porter at the Union Trust Building, treated the whole matter philosophically. "Now that they've pushed up the fares, I'm going to buy my first $1.25 pass," he said. "I used to get 12 tokens for 90 cents; now I'll just spend another 35 cents. It's O. K. with me, if they can get away with it."

"I wish the rates would take another jump," cheerfully stated Chester G. Green, a cab driver. "Passengers said to me today that they're using cabs now instead of cars." Other taxi drivers, though less assured, were hopeful.

"It would suit me if the tokens cost $1 a piece," D. L. Mackay, night manager of a gas station at Twelfth and E streets, declared. "It's too early to see if people are going to turn to autos, but I think they will—at least, while they're excited about this raise."

Auto Business Gains.

At a downtown garage, J. E. Lassiter, an attendant, said he already had observed that some were turning back to their cars.

Employes of the Transit Company were not unanimous in their opinion of the effect on street car passengers. One inspector stated that, "Every day somebody kicks; but just today when I expected it, I haven't heard a word." Several others agreed that complaints were at a minimum.

"This went off easier than when the $1.25 pass fare was charged," said a veteran inspector at Fourteenth street and New York avenue. "I have heard very few complaints; but one woman got in five cars in succession, and then got out again when she couldn't find a seat. She said that as long as she had to pay more money, she wanted to have a comfortable ride."

Another inspector, however, said during the height of the rush-hour, "They all say one of three things: They're going to buy automobiles, get passes or walk. But they squawk to the wrong people. We can't do anything about it. Anyway, they're beginning to quiet down now, though they were pretty bad this morning."

Bus passengers who now have cheaper rides than previously were pleased with the change in rates; but the prospect of universal free transfers seemed to hold small allure for the mass of Washingtonians.

Born in Worcester, Mass., Mr. McGillicuddy graduated from Holy Cross College and then for many years was a member of the Worcester city council. He also worked on newspapers in Worcester and Boston.

A past commander of the Gen. Nelson A. Miles Camp of the United Spanish War Veterans, Mr. McGillicuddy had been employed for the past 20 years as a clerk at the Veterans' Administration.

Warren Will Head Highlands Citizens

M. T. Warren last night was elected president of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association to succeed D. H. Cole in a meeting at 17 Mississippi avenue southeast.

The association voted opposition to the business privilege tax, and recommended a sales tax on luxuries as a possible substitute. A second resolution condemned the increase in street-car fares.

Other officers elected were Mrs. R. R. Clark, first vice president; Mrs. W. B. Lovejoy, second vice president; Miss Vera Barnes, secretary; Mrs. H. D. Butler, treasurer. Miss Barnes and W. W. Barnes were named delegates to the federation, and M. T. Warren, C. J. Wall and W. E. Nair, delegates to the Southeast Council.

All-Time Record Forecast in Auto Show Attendance

Prediction that total attendance at the 1937 Automobile Show, 1242 Twenty-fourth street, will top the all-time record of 40,000 was made last night by Richard J. Murphy, manager.

"Today's admissions were 10 per cent ahead of last year during the afternoon and 15 per cent in the evening," Murphy stated. "Dealers are elated with the prospects as well as with business already effected."

Automobile executives who visited the display yesterday included H. M. Rowell, Philadelphia, regional manager of Dodge Bros.; H. L. Beecrost, Eastern sales manager for the Packard Motor Car Co., and Russell M. Valpey, vice president in charge of sales of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, who is to give a broadcast over WRC at 2:15 this afternoon from the show floor.

W. A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, another visitor to the show, made a radio speech last night.

Among the unusual attractions at this year's display is the exhibition of 1938 Ford models. Washington is the only city outside of New York where the newest Fords have been presented to public view and the Washington show is the only 1937 automobile show thus far to contain a Ford exhibit.

Two hundred high school students, members of the Traffic Club of the District, are to be Murphy's guests at the show today.

Man Caught in Car Saved by Firemen

A fire rescue squad worked for nearly half an hour last night before they were able to extricate a motorist from the front seat of an automobile following a crash with a trolley at Thirtieth and M streets northwest.

The automobile rammed the street car with such force that the motor was driven through the floor boards and virtually into the lap of the driver. The man, identified through his driver's license as John Jackson, colored, 125 Sixteenth street southeast, was taken to Emergency Hospital with serious injuries.

2 Men and Woman Held in Dope Raid

Pay of Minors In D. C. Will Be Fixed by Board

Minimum Wage to Be Set for Hotel, Cafe Women After Inquiry.

A minimum wage for minors, boys and girls, working in the retail trades in Washington, will be fixed by the District Minimum Wage Board today, Miss Gwen Geach, secretary, said yesterday. The maximum age for minors is 18.

No testimony was taken on minors at the recent hearing on women adults, but Miss Geach said the board is prepared to act without further inquiry.

At the same time, the board will make plans for inquiry into the wages paid 4,000 women in Washington hotels, restaurants, cafeterias and similar establishments. A conference committee, similar to the nine-member group that held hearings on the retail wages, probably will be set up.

No figures were available yesterday on the number of minors working in retail steres in the District, although the Board of Educations issues work permits to all minors. School officials said they will have a report today.

The minimum wage fixed for minors in 1919 was on a scale basis, but Miss Geach expressed the belief that the board will now fix a flat rate. Under the 1919 scale, wages ranged from $10 to $16, the latter being paid only at the end of one and a half years' service. Step-ups of $1.50 were mandatory every four months for the first year. The $14.50 rate remained in affect for the following six months.

The minimum wage set for hotel and restaurant female workers by the former board was $16.50, with the minimum deduction of $2 a week for lodging in the case of hotel employes and 30 cents for each meal.

'Sir' for Windsor, 'Ma'am' for Wallis Is Comme Il Faut

By the United Press.

Americans who meet the Duke and Duchess of Windsor need fear no conversational misplays if they follow a few simple rules, protocol experts of the State Department pointed out last night.

If you meet the duke, it is correct to say, "I'm happy to meet you, your highness."

If you meet the duchess, experts on etiquette will not frown if you say, "I am happy to meet you, your grace."

Thereafter call the duke "sir" and the duchess "ma'am" and you will be correct.

Experts on etiquette pointed out that this form of address is followed in the English royal household. The only exception is that the Duchess of Windsor does not have royal status, and hence may not be addressed as "your highness," but merely as "your grace."

Wallace Stresses Power of Marx stage is now being set for some of the most powerful books which the world has yet seen. . . .

"The books which played their part in producing modern capitalism, fascism and communism do not have in them sufficient food for the human soul. . . .

"Modern science and technology . . . tell the need of integrating, synthesizing and co-ordinating knowledge on a higher plane. . . . The truly significant books of the immediate future in both the economic and scientific fields will deal with co-ordination and synthesis. Efforts will be made to co-ordinate science with economics, government and philosophy. . . .

Wallace departed from his prepared speech to remark that it gave him "great pleasure" to be on the platform with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who was re-elected Tuesday.

The book fair, sponsored by the New York Times and 70 publishers, will open tomorrow and last through November 21. It will occupy two floors in the Radio City International Building, twice the space of last year, when overflow crowds attended.

The show consists of book displays, exhibits of model libraries, a miniature book-publishing plant turning out a special fair book by Hendrik Van Loon, exhibits of rare manuscripts, and a hobby room.

Col. Markham Sent On Special Defense Mission in Hawaii

By the Associated Press.

An informed person disclosed yesterday that Col. Edward M. Markham, former chief of Army Engineers, has been sent to Hawaii on a special mission connected with the Army's $7,000,000 defense program for the islands.

As a personal representative of Secretary Woodring, he will survey the engineering projects in progress there and report his findings to the War Department general staff.

His recommendations may form the basis of new plans for strengthening military and naval defenses in Hawaii—a program advocated in high Army quarters because of unsettled conditions in the Far East and the approaching grant of independence to the Philippine Islands.

Markham left immediately after completing a four-year term as chief of Army Engineers on October 18. His work is expected to require six months.

Mrs. John Walker Found Dead at Home in Huntington.

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—Mrs. John S. Walker, jr., daughter of former United States Senator Howard Sutherland, of West Virginia, was found dead at her home today, overcome in her bathroom by carbon monoxide gas.

Mrs. Walker, president of the State Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, was found by her brother-in-law, Dr. George Lyons.

Coroner F. X. Schuller said death resulted from fumes from a wall heater. He expressed the opinion Mrs. Walker had been dead about an hour and a half.

Mrs. Walker was 45. Long a leader in State Republican circles, she had served as a national committeewoman, vice chairman of the State executive committee, and a delegate to the party's national convention.

Mrs. Walker is survived by three children, her husband and her parents.

Three sisters and a brother also survive. They are Mrs. Stanley (Bucky) Harris, wife of the manager of the Washington Senators; Mrs. Paul Mayo, of Denver, Colo., Mrs. Wallis Dunkle of New York, and Maj. Richard Sutherland, U. S. A.

Library Official Tells of Buying Stephens Notes

How the complete letters of Alexander H. Stephens were purchased by Bernard Baruch for the Library of Congress was described last night to the District Division of the Daughters of the Confederacy by Dr. Thomas P. Martin, chief of the Manuscript Division of the Library.

Dr. Martin told of a trip he took down the Southern seaboard in search of the papers of the Confederate Vice President, and how he returned, to be confronted, some time later, by a little, gray lady from Atlanta who showed him samples and told him she had two trunks of the yellowing documents. She had known Stephenson as a little girl.

When the Library was unable to meet the price, Baruch volunteered, and the historic documents now are in its possession. They are not for public inspection, however, but only for special research, Dr. Martin said.

Program Ready To Give Health Security to All

District Medical Society to Consider Plan to Offer Low-Cost Care.

A health security program covering every man, woman and child in the District and based upon careful studies over more than two years is virtually completed and ready for presentation to the District Medical Society, it was learned yesterday.

The project, which would bring hospitalization and medical treatment within the reach of all classes in the economic scale, has been formulated by advocates of social medicine among Washington physicians.

It was conceived long before the HOLC health insurance plan was announced and has no connection with it whatever. Nor would it be a competitive enterprise.

Details of the proposed program have not yet been divulged, but it is known that it preserves the patient's traditional right to select and, if he sees fit, dismiss his physician.

Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the District Medical Society, indicated yesterday that that group plans no court fight against the HOLC medical unit.

"The HOLC doesn't mean anything to us," he said. "We are not fighting its group insurance plan and don't expect to."

Group Health Association, Inc., opened for business last Monday at 1328 I street northwest, with more than 1,000 employes of the Home Owners Loan Corporation enrolled at $2.20 a month for individual service, $3.30 for family accommodation.

Mrs. Roosevelt Honored.

Martinez Fraca, the Cuban Ambassador, presented Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt with the Grand Cross of the Cuban Red Cross Society at the White House yesterday.

Higher Costs Of Five-Day Week Denied

Federal Workers Say U. S. Move Would Entail Little Increase.

After a quick survey, the United Federal Workers of America yesterday discounted the prediction that a Federal five-day week would entail a 10 per cent increase in cost, holding that with "thoughtful administration" the average increase to individual departments would be no more than 2 per cent.

The Civil Service Commission now is undertaking a cost survey at request of the President. The commission's report is expected by November 15. Meanwhile, the U. F. W. A. has reached certain conclusions, according to its president, Jacob Baker, who said:

"A five-day week, like any other improvement in the operation of enterprise, requires very careful planning," he stated. "But with thoughtful administration it is probable that most Government departments could install the five-day week with very little additional cost. While there may be cases where the 10 per cent increase in cost that has been quoted in newspapers would occur, the typical average cost would certainly be no more than 2 per cent.

"Instead of a cost of $100,000,000, the five-day week bill, on this basis, would add only $20,000,000 to the personnel cost of the Federal Government."

Such an innovation would not involve all cost, he argued. There would be actual savings by lowering the cost of building maintenance, building operations, administrative expenditures, transportation and communications, he said. The organization will broadcast in favor of the five-day week, it was announced, the first program being scheduled for next Tuesday night over Station WJSV.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

A. Conti Berenguer presents the Metropolitan Opera String Ensemble (Frederick Buldrini and Salvatore dell'Isola, violins; John A. di Janni, viola; Mario Mazzoni, violoncello; Amelia Conti, harp) and Sylvia Grazzini, soprano, Thursday evening in the Raleigh Hotel ballroom.

That pleasant and infrequently heard combination of harp and string quartet was enjoyed last evening at the concert by the Metropolitan Opera String Ensemble. Incapable of assuming the overbearing attitude of the piano, the harp blends its tone more dulcetly with the voices of the foursome. So agreeable was the tonal mixture that one regretted its limitation on the program to intermezzi by Thomas and Mascagni, and to the accompaniment for Miss Grazzini's reading of the gavotte aria from Massenet's "Manon."

Beethoven's eleventh quartet, the F minor, is weightier music than the four players from the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra can as yet handle with the ease that results in persuasion. Their technical performance was clean and their rhythm excellent, but in the fusion of tone and the balance of phrasing there was lacking the unanimity essential to an eloquent interpretation. They were happier in the quartet excerpts by Beethoven, Ditters and Boccherini, which were played with grace and delicacy.

One wishes, however, that they had chosen another Boccherini minuet than the "celebrated" one from the E major quintet. Somewhere among Boccherini's 91 quartets and 125 quintets there must be other minuets as charming and they would be a refreshing change.

In addition to the Massenet aria, Miss Grazzini sang to the sympathetic and expert harp accompaniment of Mme. Conti, Aslanov's vocal arrangement of a passepied by Delibes, and songs by Pergolesi, Schumann and Massenet. The impression one received on the occasion of her recent operatic debut in "Rigoletto" is confirmed by her recital disclosures. While her voice is fresh and pure, it is not being used to the best advantage. Concentration upon breath control should improve the most evident fault—unevenness in tone and unsteadiness in the culminating notes of long phrases.

Freeman Lays Cornerstone of St. Alban's Unit

Activities Building Begun at Solemn Cathedral Ceremonies.

The corner stone for the new activities building for St. Alban's, National Cathedral School for Boys, was laid yesterday afternoon by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington. The ceremony was performed in the presence of more than 500 students and their parents, patrons of the school and members of the faculty.

Assisted by the architect, Waldron Faulkner, of Washington, and the builders, Bishop Freeman laid the cement, marked it in the center and four corners with the sign of the Cross, and then set the stone. Bishop Freeman then struck the stone three times with the handle of a trowel which has been used at similar ceremonies since the foundation stone of the Cathedral was laid 30 years ago.

The Cathedral clergy, led by the Rev. Albert Hawley Lucas, headmaster of St. Albans and Canon of the Cathedral, left the Bethlehem Chapel and marched in procession to the site of the new structure at Garfield street and Massachusetts avenue immediately below the present St. Alban's buildings. Music was furnished by the Cathedral choir of boys under the direction of Robert G. Barrow, Cathedral organist.

The building will be 180 feet long and 70 feet wide, of brick with limestone trim. When completed next spring at a cost of $200,000, it will be a third and vital unit in the physical equipment of St. Alban's, the other two being the Lane-Johnston Building and the adjoining lower school.

Bishop Freeman used as his text the inscription from St. Paul, which was cut on the corner stone, "Quit you like men—be strong."

After the exercises the annual faculty tea was served in the Lane-Johnston Building.

Arbiters Offer New Hope for Labor Reunion

Rival Delegates Asked to Back Plan for Status Quo Peace.

on which industries should have industrial unions.

Organization Pushed.

Although the two labor organizations went forward with plans for "aggressive organization" of labor on both fronts, each side in the controversy was asked to give "due recognition" to the present jurisdiction of the other during pending discussions.

Negotiations, seriously threatened by uncompromising positions at previous conferences, will be resumed at 2 p. m. today.

Phillip Murray, right-hand man of John L. Lewis and chairman of the C. I. O. committee, declined to say that hopes for agreement were revived by yesterday's discussions.

"A Fine Conference."

But George M. Harrison, chairman of the A. F. of L. peace committee, struck an optimistic note.

"It was a fine conference," said Harrison. "If we can go along as we have been going today, I think we can find a solution for our troubles."

He said "more progress" was made than at previous meetings.

The central question hinging efforts to bridge the gap between C. I. O.'s mass organization policies and the A. F. of L. emphasis on craft unionism will be discussed today. That question is, which industries shall be organized on the industrial union (C. I. O.) principle.

Murray Talks With Lewis.

Murray and his delegation, which has held out for establishment of C. I. O. as an autonomous department of A. F. of L., conferred with Lewis before opening yesterday's conference.

"The issue is still whether the Federation will recognize the need of industrial unions in mass production industries, and the right of C. I. O. to organize them," Murray said as he entered the conference room.

Prior to the conference, Harrison said "it ought not to be difficult to make adjustments." He said there was no jurisdictional conflict between the original C. I. O. unions, nor between the Newspaper Guild or the fur workers and the federation. He indicated the federation might be willing to give the C. I. O. sway in the rubber and maritime industries, but C. I. O. jurisdiction in the transportation industry would have to be confined to the City of New York. The C. I. O. generally is dominant in these fields. He indicated the Federation would contest C. I. O. jurisdiction in the radio and electrical field, and in the organization of State, county and municipal workers.

Too Busy to Eat.

With newsmen, Murray was noncommittal on these Harrison suggestions as bases of settlement, commenting only that "industrial unionism is still the issue."

So earnest were the discussions that followed in the closed committee room that the meeting ran through the luncheon hour. It was after 2 p. m. when the door burst open and Harrison and Murray answered questions of waiting reporters.

Harrison said conferees covered the general situation in a "frank and free" way. He mentioned enlargement of the conference committee, appointment of sub-committees and the question of which industries should have industrial unions as only a few of the proposals made as a basis for further negotiation.

(When peace overtures were first broached, Lewis suggested a committee of 100, but later sent only 10. The A. F. of L. continued with its committee of 3.)

Murray told reporters of the other matters broached—that each side give due recognition to the other's present jurisdiction pending settlement of issues, and that both sides make "aggressive" organization efforts. But he insisted no decisions were made and no agreement reached on the agenda.

Earlier in the day Senator George L. Berry, of Tennessee, former chairman of Labor's Nonpartisan League, sent letters to Lewis and President William Green of the federation, reputedly appealing for composure of differences. Berry is president of the Printing Pressmen's Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, but is on good terms with both factions. Observers speculated on whether the Administration had inspired the letter.

Dr. Stockdale Quits D.C. Chest For New Post

Heads Speakers Bureau for Manufacturers; Is Succeeded by Dr. Rustin.

Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, former pastor of the First Congregational Church, resigned yesterday as head of the speakers unit of the Community Chest as the result of his acceptance of a post as head of the speakers' bureau of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York.

His place in the Community Chest organization will be filled by Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South.

In accordance with a promise made to Community Chest officials, Dr. Stockdale returned to Washington yesterday to address the Junior Board of Commerce and a Chest mass meeting in Alexandria last night, where he was the principal speaker.

Dr. Stockdale praised the junior board for its interest in Chest activities. "It augurs well," he said, "for the future of Washington because all of us realize that the younger men today are the business and professional leaders of tomorrow and these tasks will be your tasks."

Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Chest, expressed regret at Dr. Stockdale's leaving and praised his work in organizing speakers for this year's drive.

Dr. Stockdale came to Washington in 1931. He had previously served as Congregational minister in Toledo and Boston.

Dr. Rustin has been campaign manager and president of the Norfolk (Va.) Community Chest. He has been a member of the budget committee here and has served as vice president of the speakers' unit.

Md. Man Hangs Today in Killing Of 'Samaritan'

W. Va. Governor Refuses 3d Appeal for Stay; Mother Won't Visit Slayer.

Moundsville, W. Va., Nov. 4 (AP). William Brown Read learned today without comment and with little apparent emotion that his last chance to escape the gallows had gone and he had but one day to live.

The 25-year-old Four Corners, Md., man is under sentence to be hanged for the torch slaying of W. Earle Dollman, Charleston salesman who tried to be a good Samaritan.

Warden C. M. Stone said the condemned man's mother had written she could not visit her son, but that she had made arrangements for the disposition of his body. The warden notified Read today Gov. Holt had refused to commute the sentence.

Tomorrow morning, if prison tradition is followed, the curly-haired man will be taken from the death house while guards test the gallows trap. After receiving a bath and a new suit of clothes, Read will be taken on a long walk around the prison grounds.

Sixty-Day Stay Expires.

Usually State executions are held at 9 p. m. There has been no time announced for Read's.

His second 60-day stay expires tomorrow.

Read was sentenced by Judge Jake Fisher in Braxton County. His trial was held only a few miles from the point Dollman's charred body was found in the rear of his flaming automobile.

Companions on a tri-State crime tour testified Read was the actual killer. Both Lawrence Gingell and Joseph Kirby subsequently pleaded guilty to second degree murder in the case and were sentenced to 18 years.

They said Dollman had offered to take them to a gas station after their car ran out of fuel. The two said a quarrel ensued between Dollman and Read.

Post Newspaper Boys Meet With District Managers for Route Building Suggestions

District Managers are an important cog in the vast organization of this newspaper's circulation department. They work from district offices located at central points in Post circulation districts.

One of the most vital of their duties is the role of coach for the more than 1,000 Newspaper Boys who service The Washington Post to their customers. The above photo shows two Washington Post Newspaper Boys consulting a district manager on a problem of rearranging their route to increase delivery service efficiency. Records are consulted, charts are studied, the boys' problem is discussed and the district manager makes his suggestion.

Why are Post Newspaper Boys so interested in their routes? The foremost reason is that they are in business for themselves. They realize a profit from the sale of their papers. Therefore, it is important to them to give the best possible service, to build their business, and to make regular collections. Most of their customers consider it a definite service to make regular weekly collections.

You can further assist The Post Newspaper Boy on your route in his efforts to become a more successful business man by paying him when he makes his first collection call each week.

It happened to me

—maybe, I was lucky.

It happened this way: I found myself in a run-down condition . . . I was listless . . . despondent . . . my appetite was lagging . . . I was losing weight.

I wasn't desperate, as I knew I had no organic trouble . . . but I was puzzled as to why I was losing ground.

I was lucky because a friend suggested that I try S.S.S. Tonic . . . she said it had greatly benefited her in building back her strength and now she felt like her old self again.

An interesting fact about S.S.S. Tonic is that 47.2% of those who take it, do so upon the recommendation of others who have themselves benefited by taking this great tonic.

There is a special reason why S.S.S. Tonic is beneficial in helping people get back their health . . . because it contains the precious mineral elements so vitally necessary for restoring deficient red-blood-cells. Moreover, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite and improves digestion, making for better use of food—a very important step back to health.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells . . . to restore lost weight . . . to regain energy . . . to strengthen nerves . . . and to give your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel . . . and have your friends compliment you on the way you look.

At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The larger size at a saving in price. There is no substitute for this time tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

The Fare Increases.

Even with the fare increases approved by the Public Utilities Commission, the Capital Transit Company will not, in the opinion of the commission, be receiving the fair rate of return to which it is entitled according to pronouncements of the courts. However, as explained in the decision, fare increases cannot be ordered solely with reference to the need for increased earnings. The effect of changes in rates and charges upon the public must likewise be considered. If the service is not worth what it costs, or if the public refuses to pay the increased charges, the expected gains will not be realized.

In the case of the Transit company, however, the moderate increases authorized concern only those passengers using tokens. The holders of passes will not be affected at all, and probably increased use of passes will reduce average trip costs for numbers of people. There is also a limited group of persons who have been paying 10-cent bus fares who will benefit by the new scale of charges.

Apart from the fact that the public must expect to pay for the reasonable cost of services rendered by a public utility, there are a number of positive advantages connected with the new order. These to some extent offset the increased charges. The uniform fare and the universal transfer will remove a cause of perpetual misunderstanding and irritation. Payment of extra fares frequently results from the ignorance of passengers or the mistakes of conductors. The amounts paid out in this way probably amount to substantial sums during the year and create a good deal of ill-will between the public and employes of the company.

The commission has determined that the company is earning less than 4 per cent on what it believes to be a conservative valuation, while its operating costs have risen sharply as a result of wage increases and social security taxes. Thus it concludes that a rise in fares is justified. And if its valuation estimates are accepted, the fair-minded citizen can scarcely dissent from the verdict reached.

Italy At Brussels.

It should occasion no surprise that the one discordant note voiced at the opening of the Brussels conference was that of the Italian delegate, Count Luigi Aldrovandi-Marescotti. On the contrary it would have been startling had Mussolini's spokesman, drawing the sponge across Italy's own record in Ethiopia and Spain, taken a stand in favor of the sanctity of treaties, or offered support for the fundamentals of international law.

Of course circumstances are conceivable under which the Duce, having played the role of Mr. Hyde in East Africa and the Mediterranean, might have donned the mantle of Dr. Jekyll in the Far East. But it would be very difficult to do so with the Far Eastern mess and the Mediterranean tangle tied as closely together as is getting to be the case. Obviously one way to strengthen the Italian position in Spain is to make as much trouble as possible for the democratic powers in the Far East. Even without that definite alliance which Germany, Italy and Japan are said to be about to conclude, co-operation between the three Fascist powers arises out of their common needs as they interpret them.

Thus it happens that while Japan is not represented at Brussels, she has her agent there in the person of the Italian delegate. And it can be taken for granted that the latter will do all in his power to prevent the conference from doing anything that might in any way impede Japan's aggression against China.

Recognition of this situation, however, only emphasizes the responsibility of those nations which take their treaty obligations seriously. They must not permit themselves to be maneuvered by Italian obstructionism into a do-nothing policy. Undoubtedly there is temptation to say that the Italian position absolves the other treaty signatories of any responsibility for failure. But neither the Far Eastern crisis, nor the world crisis of which it is a part, can be mitigated by such face-saving tactics.

At Brussels the unity of the aggressive Fascist states is being abundantly demonstrated. Can the far more powerful democratic nations, whose combined stake in the Far East is infinitely greater than that of Italy and Germany together, afford to be less united?

The question need only be asked to be answered. In the last six years the trail of war and chaos has led from the Far East to Africa to Spain and now back to the Far East again, becoming steadily more disastrous with each new aggression. An opportunity to block the further development of the trend has now arisen. If this opportunity is missed "let no one imagine," in the words of President Roosevelt, "that America will escape, that it may expect mercy, that this Western Hemisphere will not be attacked."

Mr. Straus Takes Hold.

Because of the general interest in slum clearance the activities of Nathan Straus as head of the United States Housing Authority will be closely scrutinized. Especially during the organization period of this new agency it will be in the limelight. Already, Mr. Straus has recognized the validity of this public interest by announcing certain of the principles which will guide his administration.

This first announcement creates a favorable impression. New applications for housing loans and grants will not be entertained for 60 days, because, as Mr. Straus puts it, "we want to get started slowly and get our policies set." In the meantime conferences of State and municipal authorities will be held. It is apparent that Mr. Straus is determined to build from the ground up—that he is more interested in developing a sound long-term policy than in making any immediate splash.

Construction costs of the new projects are to be kept at a minimum. Some housing enthusiasts regret the rigorous cost limitations written into the act by Congress. But Mr. Straus does not appear to share this view. His interest is in building suitable living quarters for the lowest-income group at costs which will permit extensive construction. There are indications, too, that the maximum subsidies allowed by the act will not be granted in all cases. Such a policy would carry out the spirit as well as the letter of the law, which provides that "annual contributions shall be strictly limited to the amounts and periods necessary, in the determination of the authority, to assure the low-rent character of the housing projects involved."

The building industry has nothing to fear and much to hope from a policy of this sort. The inability of private enterprise to furnish decent living quarters to families in the lowest-income group has been amply demonstrated. When the Federal Government makes it possible for municipalities to enter this field, under proper safeguards, it not only avoids unfair competition with the building industry it may also stimulate the demand for better houses in the unsubsidized class, and suggest to private development companies ways and means of reducing costs so that their potential market may be greatly expanded.

Moreover, the authority is not likely to add greatly to the sum total of dwellings available. The act provides that subsidies for new houses shall not be granted unless the project involves elimination or improvement of a "substantially equal" number of unsafe or insanitary dwellings. Such destruction of slums may be postponed only in cases "where the shortage of decent, safe, or sanitary housing available to families of low income is so acute as to force dangerous overcrowding of such families."

Under these conditions the slum clearance program and the long-sought recovery of private building for families of average income may readily go forward at the same time. The favorable circumstances under which the USHA is beginning its work should tend to concentrate the interest of Congress on the other phase of the housing problem.

Brazil's Coffee Problem.

While reports that Brazil is preparing to abandon her coffee-control plan have been received with some skepticism, there seems to be no doubt that radical modifications of the program are pending.

Dispatches state that a drastic reduction in the export tax on coffee is contemplated. As this levy supplies funds with which to pay growers for coffee bought by the government for the purpose of withholding or destroying it, the assumption follows that far-reaching changes are in prospect. The lowered duties will, it is explained, put the Brazilian export trade on a better competitive basis.

The difficult position in which Brazil now finds herself, after years of struggling to maintain artificially high prices for coffee by systematic destruction of surpluses, should serve as a warning to those who see in crop restriction a ready-made solution for excessively low prices of any agricultural product. It is true that Brazil's problem has been made much more difficult by the lack of a program of production control which might have prevented an excess output. That, however, was impracticable. So the government has relied upon the simpler method of wholesale destruction to dispose of unmarketable surpluses.

Since 1931 over 52,000,000 bags of Brazilian coffee, or about 6,800,000,000 pounds, have been bought for purposes of elimination. That word covers a variety of methods for destroying coffee—such as dumping it into the sea, burning it, or converting it into fuel. Prices can undoubtedly be raised by such methods for a time. But Brazil is now confronted by a difficulty with which she failed to reckon when she began her price-raising activities.

Like our cotton growers, who have seen their export markets invaded by non-American cotton as prices were artificially raised, the Brazilians have found their coffee exports increasingly displaced by supplies from other countries. Over a period of years their share of the world trade in coffee has been steadily shrinking while they have been forced to carry the cost of so-called valorization plans that have benefited other nations.

Failure to reach satisfactory working agreements with other coffee-growing countries helps to explain the decision to launch an export drive at the present time to dispose of unwieldy surpluses. In the light of what has occurred, it is plain that Brazil's problem of overproduction is simply aggravated instead of being relieved by the control methods followed during the past seven years.

Her current coffee crop is said to be at least 70 per cent in excess of amounts that could be sold at present prices, yet Brazilian taxpayers and coffee drinkers all over the world have helped directly and indirectly to finance the cost of buying and destroying billions of pounds of coffee. And the end of all this waste is not stabilized prices, but a threatened price war, with Brazil trying to capture markets from rivals whose competitive power has been increased by her own price-fixing activities.

A 1938 G. O. P. Convention?

As the Republican National Committee meets in Chicago today there is general agreement among G. O. P. leaders that the party must shake off its lethargy and assume a more active role. But there is also sharp disagreement as to the technique which should be followed. Unless the committee is careful, therefore, any resurgence of activity may be checked at the outset by a split in its own ranks.

If it were even theoretically possible for the Republican Party to take over control of the Government at the 1938 election, there would be a strong case for a midterm convention in which to outline its policies. But the G. O. P. has no such prospects. Its urgent program at present is to make itself a hard-hitting opposition party. And the first step in fulfilling that program is the unspectacular but vital job of rebuilding local organization to the stage where it can be called effective.

Defeat of the Supreme Court plan proved that major blunders of the Administration can be checked in Congress by the united efforts of independent Democrats and Republicans. No such unity of opposition is to be anticipated if major issues are approached from a predominantly partisan viewpoint. And of course that viewpoint would be thrust forward at every turn if the G. O. P. should attempt to devise a definite platform at this stage, meantime ignoring far more fundamental work.

Moreover, any midterm convention would serve to emphasize the major schisms that at present divide the Republican Party. Instead of concentrating G. O. P. influence on measures of immediate importance, it would arouse needless antagonism over issues that the minority party is not now called upon to face. The internal difficulties which followed the special meeting of the Democratic National Committee in 1931 should serve as a warning to G. O. P. strategists against a similar mistake.

A midterm convention might serve to arouse more than transient party enthusiasm, in spite of the foregoing considerations, if it were truly representative of the rank and file, and if all factions of the G. O. P. would support it. But there is no such favorable outlook for the gathering under consideration at Chicago. It has the determined opposition of the chairmen of both the Senate and House campaign committees. Senator Borah has vigorously criticized the plan and former Gov. Landon, the party's 1936 Presidential candidate, has taken a similar attitude.

It would scarcely indicate intelligence in any party leadership to overlook the obvious need in favor of a course likely both to weaken its influence upon current legislation and to sharpen the divisions within its own ranks.

For The Championship.

In seeking to uncover a national football champion, sports spotlights are overlooking a world championship match. In Amsterdam, a small item in the day's cables informs, Dr. Alexandre Alekhine is putting up a thrilling bid for the chess crown held by Dr. Max Euwe. The scoreboard at the Krasnapolsky Restaurant reads five games for the Franco-Russian master and two for the home-town boy, Dr. Euwe; five games have been drawn.

In the current encounter, Dr. Euwe lost the kick-off and dropped back into his usual Slav defense, thus upsetting the dope that he would take a leaf from Alekhine's book and try the Nimzowich strategy. However, as the black pawns raced down the board after the opening nod, they found the Slav line-up a stone wall. Euwe held firm and for the first few plays not a first down was made.

Toward the end of the quarter, however, the stands were thrown in an uproar as queens were exchanged and Euwe gained a pawn. But Alekhine was equal to the challenge and evened the advantage, then threatened a forward pass by moving two rooks, a knight and bishop into receptive positions, as the whistle blew and the half ended.

It was a beautiful November evening—clouds of rich Habana hazing the horizon, a colorful collection of autumn-hued beards and white goatees thronging the seats, and a tense quiet broken only by the dull ticking of the referee's clock. And the outcome? Tsk, tsk, this is chess. The game was adjourned after forty moves, the board was sealed and the players went home for the night.

Today's Heresy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems timely to call attention to the indiscriminate terms being used today when differences are waging war in the realm of labor, political ideals, church creeds and policies, and international objectives.

If one is not a "radical" he must necessarily be a "reactionary," or, to use our President's favorite epithet, a "tory." The so-termed radical claims the term "liberal" as his exclusive possession, while the so-termed "conservative" dare not use "constructive" as his favorite adjective. Our differences are largely over terms and not over attitudes. If Woodrow Wilson were living, his exceptional ability to use our language with discrimination would never confuse "conservative" or "constructive" with "tory" or "reactionary."

It must not be forgotten that men may be almost tangentary in their radical ideas on some subjects and quite conservative on others. The more one knows concerning any organization or movement, be it church, state, social problems or international relations, the more is he looked upon as radical by persons less informed on any of these questions. Honest search for truth and courage to declare convictions must almost invariably run into what indolent-minded and weak men would call "radicalism."

Nothing in church or state approaches perfection so nearly as to be immune from criticism. But to call men "tories" or "reactionaries" because they do not fall in with every experiment of adventurous voyagers is as superficial as to call men "radicals" who see reason to differ from an existing order, because honest research has compelled them to differ. We shall for years to come have the conservative and the adventurous man. But these two do not necessarily destroy each other but they more often supplement each other. They do not represent "youth" as against "age" as we are hearing in some quarters today, but temperament with superior opportunities for investigation.

So we have the adage: "The heresy of today is the orthodoxy of tomorrow." J. O. KNOTT.

Dr. Smith's Dismissal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If some action is not taken by the District Commissioners in countermanding the unwarranted dismissal of Dr. Carrie W. Smith, the District of Columbia will lose one of its most energetic and progressive penal officials.

Dr. Smith's attempts to introduce a system of vocational training was a forward step in making the National Training School for Girls just what its name implies.

The District, as the Capital of the Nation, can not allow this institution to revert back to its former state of filth, barbaric treatment of inmates, and complete indifference to the future welfare of the underprivileged girls sent to it for correction.

This dismissal should be reconsidered. INTERESTED.

Aid To Political Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I was teaching at St. John's College I had my students follow the weekly studies of the American Institute of Public Opinion as published in The Post. I am now teaching at Babson Institute and I think the weekly analyses of the A. I. P. O. are so valuable that I have subscribed for the Sunday Post and am using them each week in my classes.

I wish to commend The Post for its policy of carrying these reports each week. I consider them a real contribution to the political education of the American people.

Third Term Thoughts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thomas Nelson Page, in his "Old South," tells us that an ancestor of his was such an active and devout Episcopalian that, although a layman, his fellow churchmen insisted upon making him a bishop. Their insistence became so clamorous that he finally resolved the issue with this emphatic and convincing rejoinder: "I'll be damned if I'll be your bishop."

No less emphatic declination of the third term proffer will satisfy the opponents of President Roosevelt and the New Deal. Gen. W. Tecumseh Sherman was the only available candidate for the Presidency who has ever been able to decline the proffer of a Presidential nomination in terms which the politicians could understand. The opponents of the third term have only one avowed purpose, i. e., to "stop" Roosevelt. The question is framed with such Delphic cunning that the framers would be equally satisfied with a positive or a negative reply.

No President who has any political sagacity will let loose the floodgate of political antagonism by announcing his purpose to run for a second or third term, or denature his Administration by premature refusal.

The nomination of a President, whether for a first, second or third term, depends upon the political events immediately preceding the nominating convention. No one is wise enough to read the political horoscope two or three years in advance. The President, himself, may not even know what his mind will be when the occasion arrives.

The affairs of the Nation and the world are in a state of flux, the outcome of which none can foresee or foretell. In 1940 the Nation will doubtless require the most experienced and capable man to guide its national and international affairs during the succeeding quadrennium. It now seems that Roosevelt would be that man. In such an event the American people certainly would not deny themselves the advantage of his leadership.

The example of George Washington is often cited as a precedent to change our Government without constitutional amendment. There was no great necessity for electing Washington for a third term. His declination at that time and under existing circumstances was wise and salutary. But conditions in 1940 may be so different from those of 1796 that the precedent set by the Father of his Country may be better honored in the breach than in the observance.

"The Better Hoover Looks."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Mr. Reynolds, in your letter columns of November 3, says Hoover should remain the Republican head till a better man appears, I think he is wrong. I will even go The Post one better and say that, in addition to not being a candidate, he should even omit participation as a speaker. He should stay out of the next campaign entirely.

The reason? The Administration's hirelings have built up Hoover to the unthinking as a symbol of ineffectiveness, one who was seeking to grind down the common man till his savior appeared.

I, too, fell for the Hoover-a-failure drivel, so adroitly put across by the aspirants to power. It sounds laughable now, in light of what we call a Government in Washington. I will admit that the more you contemplate this Government of the creators of a permanent emergency—with its behind-the-scenes slogan of full speed ahead, destination unknown—the better Hoover looks.

It is deplorable to have to admit that the battle for the Presidency has become pure—if you may call it that—politics; that a group which has mortgaged the futures of several generations can get away with the same old stuff; that the campaign has degenerated into a contest of showmanship and superficial arguments cleverly put across, of honeyed voices, but the same old platitudes. Conditions On American Ships.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your columns for the last few days have contained many letters relating to the S. S. Algic—discipline of American ships, brutality of American officers, living conditions, etc. Whether or not your correspondents know anything of their own knowledge about these matters is problematical. But it is apparent that most of them are not familiar with many conditions which prevail today.

T. H. Russel seems to consider that the conditions which were portrayed in Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Wrecker" exist today. Such is not the fact. One of your correspondents refers to $45 per month as the standard rate of pay. Such is not the fact. One of them states that the men are worked so many hours that they are too tired to keep their quarters clean. They may be tired from the nature of their work, but not from the long hours except in emergencies. Another refers to the bad quality of the food and its scantiness. Such is not the fact.

Dealing specifically with the Algic, the officers are of a particularly high type of American young men—the deck officers all schoolship graduates and two of them are personally known to me. The rate of pay was $72.50 per month for A. Bs. with other ratings in proportion. The 8-hour days was in force with overtime allowed when necessary. The food was the same for officers and men alike—of good quality and variety. The crew's quarters were fitted with screen doors and there were screens in the air ports; the rooms had electric fans.

Every effort had been made to make the ship comfortable and livable for all hands, but it must be borne in mind that the ship was built many years ago, and could not be entirely rebuilt. No doubt there were a few minor matters to be improved, but on the whole conditions would have been luxurious to the sailors of sailing ship days, for which we are all devoutly thankful.

I have been on board many ships of many types over a number of years and for some years previous to the present unrest. Pay, working conditions, living conditions and food were then far inferior to what they are now, but crews appeared to be happy and contented on the whole. There were no murders, suicides and no more drunkenness than was reasonably to be expected, nor was there any aspect of the crew being kept in subjection by the brutality of their officers.

The men I saw were American sailors of the type that rescued the crews of the Antinoe, Ignacio Florio, Florida, Exeter City and many others.

I have been told by persons with first-hand knowledge of instances on board American ships where the union representative has countermanded reasonable and proper orders given by the ship's officers. I have been told by men with first-hand knowledge of instances where members of the crew have broken into the chief officer's room at 2 o'clock in the morning and demanded certain things to be attended to the next day. I have been told of an instance where an officer ordered scrambled eggs and bacon for breakfast and was told that "Comrade Cook" said that he would have ham and eggs. Does the use of the phrase indicate anything?

In time, as usual, the hysteria of the moment will vanish, and a little common sense prevail. Meanwhile, the authorities will do their best to solve the problem. The Government, private owners, operators and the unions must co-operate. Not only is the American merchant marine a vital factor in the economic welfare of the Nation, but it is an integral part of our sea power. Without sea power England would be an island kingdom, the Confederacy would have won the War Between the States and Germany would have won the World War.

The Post Impressionist

Good-Bye, Now, Major.

He sat with easy grace upon the driver's seat of his ancient victoria, opposite the Pan American Union.

Now he removed his frayed but polished solemn top hat as prospective customers passed. Again he flicked his whip across the flanks of his venerable horse, and flies buzzed away in droning anger.

"Yes," he said, when someone romantically inclined crawled in the back seat to ride through Potomac Park as his parents had done long ago, "this is the best way to ride. You see more. I see something different every day. I've been a coachman all my life. Used to work for quality folks down in Richmond. Just call me Major."

The Major was indeed the last coachman in Washington. He was a dusky barrier to the complete triumph of the automobile. As long as his bony steed clattered over the asphalt, he was the Old Guard. His victoria glided like a gondola. There was no sputter of gasoline smoke. Motorists sometimes craned their necks, staring rudely or curiously, as befitted their natures. But they had a wholesome respect for the Major and his horse.

"Giddap, now," the Major commanded his steed, which was named General Sherman.

Sometimes General Sherman needed persuasion, and then the Major would crack his whip authoritatively. Then General Sherman's hoofs would go clattering above the automobile horns and the din of traffic.

The Major was past 80. He had been born a slave. Since he had been freed as a little black boy in bare feet, he had been a slave to horses. He deplored the automobile. Automobiles could not be curried. They could not be loved, as horses. They could not be talked to. The victoria, with its swimming motion, was preferable for romance. It was the vehicle in which to go courting. Not fast, the Major often said, but gentle as a May breeze. Yes, yes.

But now the Major is dead—dead these six years—and Washington is perhaps the only capital in the world which has no coachman, no victoria. They still survive in Paris, and before the civil war, in Madrid, where they were almost as numerous as taxis. They are grouped about the streets of Lisbon and Seville, and there are several in London. Go over the map of the world. Wherever you put your finger on an Old World city, there are victorias still.

The Major was the last of his breed. He was old as the moon, and like the moon, he was a charred cinder. And when he died, the Major died happily.

Young lovers built castles in the air from the vantage point of his victoria. Old-timers recaptured the days that once were, for they found the Fountain for which Ponce de Leon looked so long right in the back of the Major's victoria, with General Sherman trotting ahead.

The Major's friendships were his undoing. For the Major, who more than once had driven President Roosevelt around, was altogether a garrulous and sociable darky. He liked "folks."

One Sunday afternoon in the springtime, when business was at its best, two young men discovered the Major. They chartered the victoria for the entire afternoon and evening, for, look, hadn't one of them just passed the bar?

So when the Major arrived with his victoria and General Sherman all scrubbed and clean like a snorting mythological horse, they told the Major to come in the house. There they gave him a cast-off suit, with natty pockets, and an enormous drink of bourbon whisky.

"Thank you," said the Major, his old eyes sparkling like diamonds in a coal mine.

After all, the Major had come from the julep country, where quality folk sipped into the night. So after the fifth drink, he prodded General Sherman, and General Sherman cantered gayly into the sunny afternoon.

The young men went calling. Then one ascended General Sherman, just as though he were Paul Revere and the Red-Coats were coming. And the Major, gallant soul, had fallen asleep in the back seat, like an old rug.

There was singing the Major didn't hear. There were crowds cheering General Sherman and the victoria and the two young men, one of whom was riding the horse.

That was before the police came, and there was laughter in the street as the patrol wagon made two trips, the last of which was for the Major.

What the Major recalled or thought of when the end came is problematical. Perhaps he remembered long drives down plantation roads. Perhaps he thought of romance, and of General Sherman.

But he was an old, old man, and despite the good care at the hospital he died. They say there was a smile on his face, as though he were pleased with the new suit and the last ride which created such a stir and the way General Sherman stepped out, automobiles be damned!

C. I. O.'s 'Right To Work.'

SOME OF our ambitious mahatmas of the C. I. O. appear to have two sets of principles, one for the record and another for practical, everyday domination of the rank and file by fear. Thus the C. I. O., in an official statement of its purposes, upholds the right of every man to work for a living, adding that to deny a man that right is to strip him of the last vestige of decency.

But unofficially some of the C. I. O.'s leaders repudiate this article of the creed and scoff away the right to work on the ground that because Tom Girdler once indicated the same belief it can't be good. By the same process Mr. Girdler might contaminate the whole C. I. O program, although, in that case his indorsement probably would be rejected on a charge of dishonesty, which is a two-edged word.

BUT HAVING unofficially repudiated the official position on the right to work, denial of which strips a man of the last vestige of decency, by what process do such labor politicians go about the enforcement of this verboten? The customary way is to surround the plant with a picket line with the potentialities of a mob and to disavow violent intentions while railing at the police or soldiers, as the case may be, for preventing or suppressing terrorism. The right to work is then maintained only by the local or State government, whose obligation to protect the citizen from slugging or assassination is not qualified by any proviso that he must join a union or a strike. Nevertheless, the strike leaders will accuse the Government, local or State, of betraying its trust in refusing to connive at the violation of a legal and human right already acknowledged by the C. I. O. itself.

The workmen, in conspicuous cases, have been neither indifferent opportunists, raked up just anywhere to fill the jobs temporarily, nor mercenary terrorists of the special deputy type, but old hands who merely wanted to continue at their places. In some instances they have been in the majority, but nevertheless they were to be stripped of the last vestige of decency, to use a window-dressing phrase of the C. I. O., on the order of a minority group and at the instigation of strangers come to town to lead them to the more abundant life, though it were necessary to bat their brains out and terrorize their families in the process.

THIS SOMEWHAT Hitleresque reasoning rejects the possibility that an individual or even a majority may honestly resent the formation by terroristic methods of a huge political bloc under the domination of a few leaders whose politics are opposed to their own.

It aspires to control the national Government and impose on reluctant members an administration which would be in some respects as far left as Moscow regardless of their own beliefs. It undertakes to flog Republicans into a political group which the Communists, with crafty patience, have accepted as the best available means to their ends and to make them pay tribute out of their wages toward the financing of a movement which they conscientiously regard as a menace. It prates of democracy while expert political organizers, schooled in the technique of confusing an inexperienced rank and file, use the forms of democracy to defeat the purpose. It would make the C. I. O. not only the sole bargaining agent of all labor in the United States, but the sole licensing power, with authority to blackmail from employment any man who refused to add his mite to the political strength of the bosses and pay income tax to its treasury.

• • • •

HITLER and Mussolini also compel labor to organize, but with the proviso, identical with the mental reservation of the C. I. O.'s prospectus, that anyone who doesn't join may be stripped of the last vestige of decency. He may also lose his citizenship and be declared a traitor. The C. I. O. hasn't got round to the matter of revoking citizenship yet, but, given the power and the same disposition that it reveals today, it would.

The facts about the C. I. O. are never denied, much less refuted, the invariable answer being that Tom is a dirty bum. All this talk about Tom's status has nothing to do with the case.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Singer Makes Good.

A man whose ambition was to be a singer is the newly elected district attorney of New York County and the political sensation of New York City politics. Proving that warbling in the bathtub is not necessarily a bad habit.

• • • •

Thomas E. Dewey, who broke Tammany's stranglehold on the Manhattan district attorneyship, had a nice voice and preferred gentle things like "Sweet Mystery of Life" to "Throw 'im Down, McClosky," but he now finds himself in the capacity of a listener applauding Tammany's rendition of "Let's Put Out the Lights and Go to Bed."

• • • •

His greatest ambition was to be a grand opera star, and if Tammany could have seen ahead it would have fixed everything for him.

• • • •

There still is a question whether it is a case of a singer gone wrong or a lawyer gone right.

• • • •

If anybody had told a Tammany boss a few years ago that a boy barytone out in the little town of Owosso, Mich., would put Tammany on the spot, star in a Fusion landslide and take the D. A.'s office away from the Tiger, the reaction would have been a loud cackle and a cry of "Lay off those opium pipes!"

• • • • •

Owosso! Imagine it! And an Owosso vocalist! The Tammany braves are still demanding "Are we dreaming?"

• • • •

The new district attorney of the Fusion Party is only 35 years old and came to the big city only in 1923 to study voice. And within the past two or three years he has made every racketeer in New York suspicious of all singers.

• • • •

A voice teacher accidentally heard Tommy Dewey warbling at a Chicago songfest and advised him to come to New York. The voice teacher now has every big-time gangster as his sworn enemy.

• • • •

Mr. Dewey likes native Indian melodies but the Tammany wigwam heard no Indian Love Call from his lips in the recent campaign.

• • • •

He admits his rise to the political heights in the largest city in the world was an accident, but he holds that it is Tammany's own fault if it carried inadequate accident insurance.

• • • •

The public enemies are on the run. They are whipped, scared and talking of taking up some new means of a livelihood.

• • • •

You don't suppose they're considering voice culture?

The Duke of Windsor will deliver a coast-to-coast broadcast from the British Embassy at Washington on the night of November 12. We were afraid from the very first that he was asking too much when he begged that his trip be regarded as private.

Argentine Election

Victory Of Ortiz Suggests Redirection Of South American Nation Toward Washington; First Civilian Since 1930.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Buenos Aires.

BY THE TIME this reaches the United States the electoral college of Argentina will have confirmed officially what is already known unofficially. The slate of the Concordancia, the "official" candidates, Senors Ortiz and Castillo, have won the Presidential election and all is set for them to take office at the appointed time. Allegations of fraud and illegality have been rife; and the strongest opposition party, the Union Civica Radical, with former President Marcelo T. Alvear, who was a defeated candidate in the present election, has taken action with respect to its future course. It will not co-operate with the incoming government and refuses to allow its victorious candidates to legislative offices to take their places.

The well-known daily, La Prensa of this city, has been publishing a number of critical commentaries on electoral procedure in this nation. With respect to proposed reforms and the Presidential election, La Prensa comments that it is surprised that the incoming administrators should be proposing an "immediate revision of electoral procedure" because, in the opinion of the editorial writer, it would seem that a method of winning all elections had already been discovered. The reason for these proposed modifications is "that they are convinced that it would be hazardous to repeat next March—when deputies and a senator are to be elected—what was done on September 5, and one must suppose that they think with Pyrrhus when he explained: 'Another victory like this one and I shall be ruined . . .'"

Despite these complaints and the action of the Union Civica Radical there seems to be little likelihood that there will be anything but pacific resistance to the verdict of the polls. The very fact that the whole matter is being fought over in the press and that the Union Civica Radical is meeting regularly to discuss the national situation, and its own situation in particular, seems to indicate that Argentina is returning to a status which, save in 1891 and 1930, was the normal: No matter what the results at the polls, public and government acquiesced even though the government's party had been defeated.

ROBERTO M. ORTIZ.

Presented Fine Record As Minister Of Finance.

IN THIS INSTANCE the victory of Senor P. M. Ortiz, until recently the minister of finance in the Justo government, meets with the approval of the official forces who directly or indirectly espoused his candidacy. Senor Ortiz's record as minister of finance is an impressive one and must have been a big argument in his favor at the polls. Argentina's financial and economic position has been definitely on the upgrade since 1932 and her credit in world money markets is of the best.

Internally the situation is a humming one with activity and construction on all sides. In the past 12 months the Argentine Republic has seriously discussed buying out of the Standard Oil interests, purchasing many of the British-owned railroads and has actually undertaken financing which shows her real financial situation.

At the present time any change in an Argentine administration is of singular interest to all those who have been following the Pan-American policy of the present Administration in Washington. Ever since 1933, and notably at the Pan-American Conference of that year, strenuous efforts have been made to win over the Argentine foreign minister, Don Carlos Saavedra Lamas, to a more all-American point of view. In spite of courting that must have turned the head of almost anyone, no matter how great, the program failed as far as the local foreign office was concerned, but not as far as the Argentine masses and many others in the federal government were concerned.

In fact, it can be said on good authority that a profound divergence between the foreign office and the executive has existed for a long time. Many instances of almost open and public breaks are cited and it is believed that only certain Latin-American susceptibilities and sensibilities explain how and why this dichotomy of attitude with respect to foreign policy was permitted to exist. It is also alleged that President Justo himself would have played the all-American game with President Roosevelt, Messrs. Hull and Welles just as heartily had not these other obstacles intervened. Recent Argentine actions have caused the observer to wonder whether a radical shift in Argentine policy may not be expected when the new government comes into power.

Visit To United States Rumored Before Election.

THERE IS some significance in the fact, as rumor has it, that Senor Ortiz was planning a visit to the United States before taking office. It is true that important matters between the two nations are pending, but it is also true that, all told, British-Argentine ties are stronger than those between her and the United States. The way in which the Argentine press has applauded President Roosevelt's Chicago speech is suggestive when one notes what and whom he attacked and whom and what the Argentines have defended, officially, in the last twelve months. Still greater, however, is the contrast between the frank, open and wholehearted espousal of his ideas in Chicago and the cautious and almost insolent indifference with which his specehes in this city last December were received.

One great daily of this city asks a pertinent question when it wishes to know in whose name Ambassador Espil spoke when he took to the State Department the Argentine approval of Mr. Roosevelt's speech: His own? That of the foreign office? Or that of the executive? That action, too, seems to bespeak a shift in the Argentine point of view. Whether he spoke for one or another of the officials here, he spoke for the Argentine nation as a whole, and that in order to approve utterances which at the peace parley certain Argentine elements would not have supported.

And though, judging by the reactions of the Buenos Aires press, the recent election was a burlesque of democracy, such things are most relative in this day and time. Belmonte, the excellent Brazilian cartoonist, has pointed to the Argentine election as a triumph of democratic processes and classes it with the recent elections in the United States. When so many elections are nothing but herd movements at the point of real or hypothetical bayonets, or when many nations change government only by revolution, Belmonte's point is well taken and shows up the Argentine election in a fair light. Boiled down, those who won on September 5 in this nation also believe that democracy triumphed. Those who lost think it was trampled under foot.

Results Suggest Return To Political 'Normalcy.'

IN ONE SENSE the election begins a return to political normalcy. Senor R. M. Ortiz is a civilian, whereas the two Presidents who came into power after the overthrow of Hypolito Irigoyen in 1930 were generals. Argentina has had eminent civilians as chief executives, men who made names for themselves in the sciences and letters. Even those who were "generals" have immortalized themselves by their literary works rather than by their military achievements. One was known as the "School Teacher." Whether Senor Ortiz will be able to emancipate himself from the army remains to be seen. It any event the chain has been broken and a civilian moves into the Argentine Presidential seat.

Latin America

By William C. McCain

'Its Place In World Life.'

THE UNITED STATES and the republics of Latin America have been drawing closer together in recent troubled years and will undoubtedly find still closer relationships mutually advantageous in view of the abyssmal conditions existing in Europe and Asia. Therefore, Americans should seek to improve their knowledge and thus their understanding of their southern neighbors in order to build a sounder foundation for friendship with them.

Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, who writes from long and intimate association with the Latin Americans, has done his share—perhaps more than his share— in his latest book to portray the excellent qualities of the Latin Americans and to show the way to more intimate relations with them. As a basis for friendship between Americans and Latin Americans, he points out that first they must recognize their fundamentally different approaches to life:

The Anglo-Saxon is practical. He wants things to happen. He wants people to be on time. He wants organization. He likes to standardize. He builds great skyscrapers, great industrial communities. He wants to work strenuously and to play strenuously. He wants the direct approach and is impatient of circumlocution.

The Latin American is theoretical. He likes to discuss. The favorite mood of his verbs is the subjunctive. "Tomorrow" is his favorite word. His approach is indirect. His relations are individualistic and organizations have little appeal for him. Unlike his North American contemporaries, he will not sacrifice for efficiency's sake the time necessary for cultivating friendships.

• • • •

THE PEOPLE OF Latin America are derived from three original stocks: Indian, Iberian and Negro. The blood of the Indian predominates in most countries, but the chief thought influences are due to the Iberians—the Spaniards and the Portuguese. In Brazil and the Caribbean lands the carefree attitude of the African element has been added to the Indian and Iberian strain.

The Latin Americans waged long and bitter struggles between 1810 and 1825 for political independence. Their preparation for democratic institutions had been meager, and they have found the way to democracy long and tortuous. Their first hundred years of freedom from Spain has been marked with internecine civil strife, principally political in character. Since 1930 widespread revolutions have tended to rise more from economical than from political causes. Direct foreign intervention has been eliminated for the time, but foreign loans and international influences arising from nitrates, wheat, coffee, copper and oil still contribute to political instability.

• • • •

LABOR IS becoming restless in Latin America. In some countries its incoherent cries are scarcely heard in the night; in others strong voices are threateningly demanding new rights and privileges. Social legislation arrived late among the Latin Americans, but has received considerable attention in recent years. Students interest themselves in politics and fight for political and social reforms. They are often the leaders in liberal and radical movements and are foremost in fanning the flames of revolt against political and economic injustices. Communism is making a tremendous bid for supremacy, but has developed little strength of its own in Latin America. The way to social progress has been blazed by Uruguay with evolutionary methods and by Mexico with revolutionary methods. Which will be the direction of the other southern republics?

The past few years have marked a new era in inter-American relations. Policies developed by the past two administrations in Washington have fundamentally changed the attitude of Latin America toward the United States.

The following actions of the American Government have been especially important in creating friendly feelings: Renunciation of intervention in Latin America, abandonment of dollar diplomacy and the policy of nonrecognition of revolutionary governments, agreement to permit freedom of discussion in Pan American conferences, recognition that Panama deserves better treatment, abrogation of the Platt amendment, withdrawal of all armed forces from Latin America, participation in strengthening the peace machinery of the Americas, agreement to end fiscal intervention in Haiti, encouragement of Latin Americans to settle their own differences, proposal of a plebiscite on the independence of Puerto Rico, sanction of the activity of the League of Nations in the settlement of the Chaco War, refusal of the State Department for the first time in 25 years to influence presidential elections in Nicaragua and approval of the Montevideo treaties and negotiation of tariff pacts with Cuba, Brazil, Colombia, Haiti, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

• • • •

LATIN AMERICA is gradually assuming an important place in world affairs. The Buenos Aires conference of 1936 particularly aroused universal interest. While Asia is step by step falling under the domination of Japan, while Africa is still being civilized by imperialistic Europeans, while Europe is groping toward a life-and-death struggle between democracy and dictatorship, and while North America is occupied with a growing conflict between rugged individualism and a more socialized order, South America seems to be in a more independent position to choose from all civilizations for its future. Its choices are being conditioned by the more or less active courting of Japan, Germany, Italy, Russia, Great Britain and France. If the United States wishes to develop the present improved political relations into real fellowship, it must actively encourage the exchange of cultural ideals with the Latin Americans.

These facts and many others Dr. Inman has portrayed with a facile and illuminative pen. His historical backgrounds are standard and accurate, but his discussions of recent events are considerably flavored by his friendship for the Latin Americans.

Bookends

THERE WILL be a new book out the twentieth of this month which, for succinct and to-the-point titles, takes the cake . . . It is called "Why Edward Went" . . . If the author goes in for alliteration, and I do, he might write a succeeding volume and call it "Windsor Went With Wally" . . .

• • • •

MARQUIS JAMES arrived in town this week to find his biography of "Andrew Jackson" on the best-seller lists at Brentano's . . . Bernard Mayo's "Henry Clay" is also on this list . . . Apparently Washingtonians are reading about Americans first . . .

• • • •

WHAT IS THE street where the handsomest and best dressed women in the world promenade? (It is not Fifth Avenue) . . . How can you draw a crowd in New York without saying a word? Don't ask me . . . I'm just like you, compelled to wait until November 18 to read Hulbert Footner's "New York: City of Cities" . . . There's one consolation . . . At least the publishers don't ask us to hold our breath until that time . . .

• • • •

STACKPOLE SONS recently gave a party on the occasion of their publication of Irving Tressler's "How to Lose Friends and Alienate People" . . . From all I can hear a great deal of alienating went on . . . Guests practiced insults on each other while the hosts jibed them for consuming so many cocktails . . . And the author was left severely alone so that he might mope in a corner over the success of his spiteful book . . .

"WHY MEN LIKE US," by Mrs. Louise Paine Benjamin, has just been published . . . Mrs. Benjamin took a poll on rules for women's charm and got many interesting results . . . The couturier whom she interviewed said for women to "Eliminate all gadgets and superfluities in your clothes. Don't hide under strange hats" . . . That last admonition gives me a clew as to why so many women are wearing veils this season . . . Apparently they have the courage to wear these new fall hats but they haven't the nerve to let people see who they are . . .

More About the Singing Tower of Luray, Va.

"YOU CAN'T BUILD a wall around it," Anton Brees told me. "The music of the carillon is the most democratic music in the world.

"It isn't like the music you hear at concerts. It isn't the sort of music that you can hear only if you have money for a $3 seat. It's the people's music. And there's no way you can take it away from them."

I hadn't thought of the Singing Tower of Luray, Va., in terms of "democratic music." But Anton Brees, the Flemish carillonneur, who will play at its dedication, had the force of his convictions in his argument.

"It may seem strange to you that a singing tower which cost more than $150,000 should provide the most democratic music in the world," he said. "But it does!

"You see the carillon developed the music of the people. It was the creation of simple bell ringers, who decided to play a tune. Its music was for the people pausing in the streets. It doesn't matter what music you play, just so long as it is the music of the people.

"You see," he said, "I'm not like a man playing in a crowded hall. I have no reason to become offended if my audience stirs uneasily. I just sit up here in the bell tower and play songs. My listeners? I don't have to worry about them.

"They may be standing near the bell tower. They may be driving by in cars. Or pausing in their work to come to the door and listen to a song close to their hearts."

• • • •

HE FINGERED the wooden handles of the keyboard and the heels of his hands descended lightly. The bells in the tower swayed under the impact of the metal clappers and the strains of a Stephen Foster melody surged out across the gray countryside.

I left the tower and perched on a rail fence about 200 yards away. Gray clouds scudded across the dark canvas sky, and it was raining. The Stephen Foster melody came to a close and Brees began to improvise. I couldn't see him, naturally. But I could imagine his silvered head bent forward at the keyboard.

I had thought that a carillon could only boom out music, but when Brees played the bells, the notes shivered the dark autumn air like the small bells of an Indian temple.

Rain drizzled down my collar, but as the music swept out through the heavy air, the rain didn't seem important. A tourist car, far up the road, stopped and the driver stood in the road listening. On the edge of Luray housewives were possibly pausing in their work as the music swept out of the cold autumnal air. That, I figured, was what Brees himself conjured up, when he spoke of his music as being democratic.

And then Frank Godfrey, who was sitting on the fence beside me, began to laugh.

"He's got a sense of humor," he said, as he pulled his collar closer against the now driving rain. "Do you know what he's playing? He's playing a Flemish melody, 'Des Winters als het regent,' which means 'In the winter when it rains.'"

• • • •

THE MUSIC of the carillon is democratic music, music for all the people. And the singing tower has been democratically conceived. The bronze tablet at the entrance to the tower reads "Given to the town of Luray, Va., with the hope that it may be of cultural value—and provide entertainment."

But Mr. T. C. Northcott, the donor, can phrase his feelings in his own words. And much better.

"This is my town," said the spare little man whom 93 years have touched lightly. "I like these people. I thought they would like this tower. I wanted to leave them something—something which would last."

It is no secret in Luray that Mr. Northcott "likes these people." They are his townsfolk, and he knows them all by name. Though he is 93 years old, age has never barred the owner of the Luray Caverns from his daily stroll along the main street nor curbed his friendly greeting to those he meets.

He wants his tower to be an integral part of life in Luray. Not only now, but through the years. For that purpose he is setting aside an endowment of $60,000 for its upkeep and to provide training for a native of Luray to play the carillon.

First to take over the carillon under the Northcott endowment will be Mr. Charles Chapman. Born and raised in Luray, Mr. Chapman is already an integral part of the life of the pleasant little Virginia town. He's principal of the town school with its 900 students.

It won't seem strange to residents of Luray to hear Mr. Chapman playing the carillon. They remember the slender youngster of not so many years ago, who found time from delivering groceries for his dad's store to pick up and play any musical instrument at hand. They remember how he led the Luray band, played the clarinet, and accompanied the glee club.

They also reflect proudly on how "Charley" went to the University of Virginia, Johns Hopkins and the Peabody Conservatory, and came back to Luray to make good as high school principal. And all the time he remained the same serious youth with the warming smile.

Yes, they're going to enjoy their singing tower down in Luray, Va. And they're going to feel particularly good about it, when they pause in their work as a Stephen Foster melody drifts down the valley of the Shenandoah toward the town.

And Mr. Chapman—one of their own boys—is playing the bells.

SUNDAY: A full page of pictures on the Singing Tower of Luray will be found in the Sunday Washington Post's Rotogravure section.

Trade Treaties Held Check on Dictatorships

Dr. Grady Considers Hull Agreements Barriers to Totalitarian States.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 4.—Dr. Henry F. Grady, Tariff Commission vice chairman, pictured the reciprocal trade agreements tonight as applying a check upon the world's totalitarian states.

At the same time, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian Ambassador to the United States, said "Brazil will stop its commerce with Germany if the United States will stop her commerce with Germany." He referred to American traders' concern over the extent of Brazilian-German business, involving the loss of some American markets.

Sees Changing Trend.

Dr. Grady, former college of commerce dean of the University of California, told the Foreign Trade Council's dinner at its national convention here:

"The Hull program attempts not only to increase the volume of world trade, it aims to neutralize the marked trend in recent years of countries to throw off established economic and political rules and establish their own.

"It seeks by precept and example to induce the countries of the world to co-operate in re-establishment of the international economic system. Such a consummation will not only make possible the ever-increasing flow of international business, but will check the tendency toward autarchy and totalitarianism."

Points to Big Income.

Dr. Aranha said the fact that this country has one-half of the world income with only one-fifteenth the population was among factors which had led the world into "confusion and danger."

The Brazilian ambassador, applauded warmly at the end of his address, answered questions from the floor. One of these was: "I wonder whether his excellency would comment further on the probable trend of the German-Brazilian askimark (trading marks) business."

"I will tell you with great pleasure," Aranha replied. "Brazil is doing more against Germany than the United States. And Brazil will stop its commerce with Germany if the United States will stop her commerce with Germany."

25 Pct. Air Round Trip Excursions Offered

Chicago, Nov. 4 (AP).—Transcontinental & Western Air announced today adoption of Nation-wide round-trip winter excursion fares, a pilicy it said set a precedent in airline operations.

The new fares, effective Monday, represent a discount of 25 per cent from regular one-way fares. Excursion tickets will be good on the going journey on either Saturday or Monday and may be used for the return trip up to and including the fifteenth day from date of starting the journey.

Mexicans May Exempt Tourists' U.S. Purchases

Mexico City, Nov. 4 (AP).—An authoritative source said today that the Mexican treasury department is considering favorably petitions from border merchants to allow Mexicans returning from the United States to bring back 200 pesos (about $55) worth of merchandise duty free.

This would be in an effort to forestall legislation before the United States Senate, which passed the House last term—to prohibit United States citizens who spend less than 48 hours in Mexico from taking advantage of the existing $100 exemption clause.

Gov. La Follette Better.

Colon, Panama Canal Zone, Nov. 4 (AP).—The condition of Gov. Philip F. La Follette of Wisconsin, ill of influenza in the United States Government Hospital here, was reported today as satisfactory.

SEPARATE appeals by social agencies generally cost 15-25%. Many cost 50-75%. Some "benefits" cost more than they raise. The Community Chest method of soliciting, collecting, and budgeting funds for 64 member agencies has cost a nine-year average of 6½%.

RodenbergFortune Of $342,871 Divided Between Two Sons

In a will filed in District Court yesterday, former Representative William A. Rodenberg, of Illinois, named his two sons, William R. and Robert R. Rodenberg, as his sole beneficiaries. The will explained that Mrs. Mary G. Rodenberg, the widow, was not mentioned because she had been previously taken care of.

The estate, valued in excess of $342,871, is to be divided into halves and each son is to get the income from a half. When each of the sons reaches the age of 40, he is to have one-half of his portion of the estate and when each son reaches 45, he is to get the remaining half.

Mr. Rodenberg, who died September 10, gave his secretary, Mrs. Margaret Finch, $2,000, and two servants, Frank and Amelia Dixon, get a like amount.

Mrs. Rodenberg and William R. Rodenberg, together with the Liberty National Bank are named trustees of the sons' awards, and Mrs. Rodenberg was also named executrix.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

That shameless hussy, Mme. Rumor, is telling all who will listen that the only person in town who wields any real authority with President Roosevelt is his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Jimmy Roosevelt.

• • • •

All the presidential daughters-in-law are lovely creatures and could probably make the President listen; but Betty Cushing Roosevelt is the only one now resident in Washington, so it seems to be up to her.

• • • •

She doesn't dabble, of course, in serious matters of state . . . (Her able husband, Jimmy, takes care of that angle . . .). But in minor emergencies it's Betty who is summoned to the White House.

"—like Zilch at St. Helena"

When the President insists on working too late at night, and no one can persuade him to go to bed betimes or to sleep an extra hour or two in the morning, it's Betty's phone that's apt to ring insistently.

• • • •

Or when he has been burning the candle at both ends, as he is apt to these clamorous days, and the doctor tells him to take it easy for a morning or a day, and he stubbornly refuses, it's Betty's pleasant chore to make him listen to reason.

• • • •

She seems to have a way with him, as beautiful daughters-in-law occasionally do; then they are a great help to mother-in-law . . . Perhaps the fact that she is the daughter of a great surgeon augments her influence in such crises.

• • • •

So it seems she can park her car hastily in the White House driveway, glide into the room, and say in effect:

"See here, Mr. President! What's going on? Now relax and be good!"

Which is a valuable and important role.

• • • •

Democrats are a little vexed about the current Hoover-Landon row and other rows in the Republican Party.

These rows, oddly enough, have slowed up Democratic campaign contributions.

"Why," ask the Democratic money bags, "should we put out good money when the Republicans are so obligingly fighting among themselves?"

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt has a gargantuan, almost a Rabelaisian, sense of humor, and two of his current autumnal quips are worth preserving in the record with some permanency.

• • • •

One was his flattering bouquet to Senator Murray, when he was passing through Montana, as one who did big things for his State, and his forgetfulness of Senator Murray's colleague, Burt Wheeler, the not-quite-invisible man.

• • • •

That was a little like stopping off at the island of St. Helena and dropping a wreath for faithful Pierre Zilch in complete forgetfulness of a guy named Napoleon, or for Elmer Thottlebottom at Mount Vernon in lieu of G. W.

"—ought to be a tie"

The other quip was Mr. Roosevelt's eloquent tribute recently to the radio and movies as an educational force . . . In his momentary enthusiasm for the moom pictures and the audible word, he simply forgot the newspapers, poor things.

• • • •

And that's something like changing the Lord's Prayer to read "Give us this day our daily cream puffs."

• • • •

Incidentally, I'm a deep Roosevelt admirer of both Senators Wheeler and Murray, if for no other reason than that each of them has six children . . . (Great healthful State, Montana!). Six children apiece ought to give the two Senators at least a tie in Mr. Roosevelt's esteem. (Unless Senator Murray's six sons win the nod!) . . . .

Traffic School For Police Opens Nov. 15

1,300 Officers to Study Modern Methods of Investigation.

Plans for a police traffic school, with an intensive six-day course that eventually will be taken by all 1,300 members of the force, were announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

Maj. Brown's announcement, which said the first class of 20 officers will enroll November 15, followed close after Washington's eighty-eighth traffic fatality had been recorded; two local persons, including a 4-year-old boy, were injured seriously, and the Keystone Automobile Club reported that more than 350 persons literally have walked to their death on Washington streets by failing to observe rudimentary principles of safety.

Modeled after the University of Maryland traffic school, attended by seven Capital policemen last summer, Washington's school will stress modern traffic handling, accident investigation and gathering of evidence.

A dozen lecturers, including four from outside the department, will conduct the six daily one-hour classes. A two-hour examination will be given on the final day, Maj. Brown said, and a passing grade will be required of all officers dealing largely with traffic control and accident investigation.

Arrests May Increase.

Two immediate results are expected: A change in court procedure, eliminating preliminary hearings in accident cases before the corporation counsel, and stricter investigation of accidents, at first probably leading to a rise in arrests.

Illustrating the effects of more stringent accident investigation, Maj. Brown said accidents involving property damage only, and settled privately between drivers, no longer will be considered as officially closed cases. Investigation of tire marks, of damage to cars, questioning of drivers and witnesses will lead to arrests for infractions of traffic regulations—infractions previously not detected by untrained officers.

Although this may mean an immediate rise in arrests, Maj. Brown pointed out that after a time arrests probably will remain stationary or decrease, and that traffic accidents themselves will decrease.

Illustrating the up-to-dateness of the school's curriculum, Maj. Brown referred to lectures to be given by Private F. L. Biswanger on the use of sound motion pictures in taking testimony from drivers and witnesses directly after a crash, and in reconstructing the accident itself.

Radio Men First Students.

Men from the 12 precincts' radio scout cars and traffic bureau radio cars will comprise the first students. Following them, foot men assigned to traffic work will be instructed.

After that, according to Maj. Brown's plans, the rest of the 1,300 regular officers, from rookie privates to inspectors themselves, will take the course.

The latest traffic death was that of Patrick Higgins, 69, of 598 Park road northwest. Higgins was injured the day after Christmas, 1936, but died only two days ago. The driver will be brought here from New Jersey to testify.

Charles Perry, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Perry, 8911 Fairview road, Silver Spring, was taken to Walter Reed Hospital with a concussion of the brain following an accident late yesterday. According to police, John H. Henricksen, 2100 block of C street northwest, drove the car which hit the child on Georgia avenue, near Woodside drive. Henriksen was charged with reckless driving.

The other victim is Gertrude S. Cummings, 41, of 4213 Ellicott street, being treated at her home for a fractured skull. Following a two-car accident at Forty-sixth and Ellicott streets northwest Wednesday night, she reported to police that no one had been injured. Yesterday her condition was undetermined, police reported, following a relapse.

The Keystone Automobile Club's report said 720 traffic deaths have been recorded here since 1931, of which 513 were pedestrians.

Laughter Resounds Through One of City's Oldest Homes

Post Staff Photos.

One of the city's oldest houses has been remodeled and thrown open as a place of play and instruction for Southeast Washington children. Hand in hand, two youngsters gaze at the structure's whitewashed front (upper). Bernice Padow (left) walks along a line of compartments hunting for her own towel, washcloth and brush. Children are taught to care for their own wash things and to put them in place when they are through. Robert L. Rawlins (right) is attempting to induce Pinkey, the rabbit, to nibble a carrot.

A City of Children bustled yesterday with boy and girl inhabitants, who romped and dined in spacious ballrooms where the gentlemen and ladies of a century ago often waltzed the night away.

For, out in Southeast Washington, Friendship House held a preview in its new headquarters, located in one of the oldest houses in the city.

The scuffle of feet and the shrill of childish laughter rose in gay bedlam above the clatter of the teacups as officials and parents sipped and talked of the future of Friendship House, and its great past.

Built in 1796, from the nucleus of an old log cabin in the midst of a forest, the remodeled building into which Friendship House is being moved is at 619 D street southeast. The structure, rambling and of white brick, with the old stable and blacksmith shop still intact, has seen the Nation grow from its infancy. The house, which is to belong to children for years to come, was constructed around the cabin in 1796 by Maj. William Mayne Duncanson, of the British Army, who had come to America from India, with tall tales and taller glasses.

Seven-year-old Hubert Lawrence Rawlings, one of the older children, chased Pinky, Friendship's mascot rabbit, as his elders in the next room recalled how Duncanson lost the house for debt, and then, three years later, guns were booming around Bladensburg and the "redcoats" really were coming. In the rooms where the little toothbrushes of the children hang, row on row, wounded soldiers were treated after the battle.

"Yes, it is a house I am building. The blocks are pretty and they are supposed to be bricks," murmured a little girl in one of the playrooms.

Francis Scott Key, who wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," lived in the house for years. Capt. August A. Nicholson moved in in 1838 and had the house remodeled with bricks imported from England. There his wife, grieving over the death of her daughter, committed suicide. Out in Southeast Washington, in those days, they said she returned to haunt the place.

"A ghost is something you hear about Halloween," observed a wise, old child, building a castle with blocks.

The house was vacant for a while. Then, in 1856, Senator John Clayton, of Delaware, moved in. He built the ballroom where the children play, and which is to be the settlement theater. Next owner was Count Louis Charles Pourtales. He fled Germany because his father opposed his marriage. It was Pourtales who built the great wine cellar, 42 feet underground, an imitation of the one in his German castle. The cellar has been filled up now.

In 1871, Olivia, or Mrs. Emily Edson Briggs, one of America's first newspaperwomen, who covered the Civil War, moved in. She used to send stories to Philadelphia by messenger from the house.

Until the gift from an anonymous donor made it possible for Friendship House to own the historic structure, members of Mrs. Briggs' family lived there.

But the children who tenanted their new city yesterday for the first time did not know or care that beneath the same roof had stood George Washington, Gen. Lafayette, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John Calhoun, Stephen A. Douglas and Abraham Lincoln.

The chief cook, "Aunt" Annie Hilliary, 75, and born a slave in Orange County, Va., cooked pies and cakes and at a safe distance little eyes watched in admiration.

The official opening of the new Friendship House will begin on Sunday, November 21, and last throughout Thanksgiving week.

Citizens Carry Fight on Liquor To Conference

The Brookland Citizens Association last night carried its fight to exclude establishments dealing exclusively in alcoholic beverages from the Brookland area to the meeting of the Northeast Conference.

The association, through its delegate, Dr. George Ellis, asked the conference to back its stand against issuance of a license in the 3700 block of Twelfth street northeast. The conference, meeting in the Twelfth Precinct Station, voted to indorse the Brookland fight.

The entire Brookland area is without a liquor store with the exception of a drug store with a liquor department, Dr. Ellis told the conference.

The Metropolis View Citizens Association was admitted to membership in the conference, which agreed to support its campaign for location of an elementary school in its area. Students now go by bus to the Brookland school and the conference agreed to ask the Capital Transit Co. to change the stop at Tenth and Monroe streets northeast so children will not be required to cross the busy intersection.

The conference also indorsed an appeal by Fred Nickel for extension of New York avenue from Bladensburg road to Defense highway. Nickel represented the Cheverly-Tuxedo Citizens Association.

The $2,000 accumulated by Nancy Jorss, daughter of Karl Jorss, sr., before her death two months ago, has been placed at the disposal of the Kiwanis Club's crippled children's fund as a memorial to her.

Announcement of the gift was made yesterday by George Mangan, club president, at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel. The girl, who died in her fourteenth year, saved the money in a building association and her father, as its trustee, has turned the money over to the club to be used in caring for children not yet on its rolls.

At the same meeting, Albert B. Van Voorhees was assured of becoming the club's next president when he was nominated without opposition by Lewis T. Breuninger, a past president. Also named without opposition were Edward S. Pardoe for the first vice presidency and Frank L. Peckham for the second vice presidency.

The only contests at the elections November 18 will be for the nine vacancies on the board of directors. Nominated yesterday were:

Charles German, Herbert Gill, Karl Jorss, Al Howard, James C. Dulin, jr., Arthur Bishop, Herman Hoffman, Risley G. Hunt, Bill Smith, Herman Miller, Raymond Garrett, Dave Maxwell, Judge Gus A. Schuldt and John Scharf.

2d Precinct Slated to Be Cut in Half

Police Area Now Leads City in Accidents and Prisoners.

Division of the Second Police Precinct, covering a large section of downtown Washington, into two smaller precincts within the near future was predicted last night by high police sources.

The present Second Precinct is the largest in the city in the number of calls and accidents, and handles one of the greatest number of prisoners. It is bounded by K street northwest on the south, Fifteenth street on the west, and North Capitol street, Florida avenue and First street northeast on the east.

Precinct to Be Divided.

Under plans which will probably be put into effect early next year, the precinct will be divided in half on either Q or R streets. The western boundary of both new precincts may be extended one block farther, or to Sixteenth street, authoritative sources indicated.

The plan has been backed by Maj. Ernest W. Brown for nearly three years, who points to the area covered by the present precinct, and its problems in handling numerous accident cases and arrests, as reason for the change. Businessman's associations and citizens' organizations have generally indorsed the proposal.

Numbers Changed.

If the plan goes through, as is predicted in unimpeachable circles, the southern new precinct will become the new No. 2, with its station house where the Women's Bureau is now located, on Fifth street, between M and N streets. The northern precinct, north of Q or R streets, will be known as No. 8, with headquarters at the present Second Precinct Station, at U and Nine-and-a-Half streets.

The present Eighth Precinct, in the far northwestern corner of the city, will become No. 13.

A small item for remodeling the present Women's Bureau into a precinct station, including changing the cell block and installing new telephone connection to street boxes, is included in the present District budget, and is believed to be favored by budget authorities.

Plans are also made for conversion of the present Police Court Building, adjacent to headquarters, into the new Woman's Bureau when the Police Court is transferred to its new building.

Italians Here Hold Armistice Dinner

More than 100 World War veterans of the Italian and American armies with their guests last night celebrated the Italian Armistice, signed a week in advance of the general armistice on November 11.

The gathering, staged annually under auspices of the Italian World War Veterans' Relief Association, was held at the Lincoln Cafe, 518 Tenth street northwest.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Coming Screen Events Cast Their Shadows Before In Shapes of Romance, Comedy, Music and Drama

Warner Executives Release List of Five Incoming Film Plays of Note; Legigon to Honor "Dead March;" Mr. Ratto Observes Anniversaries; Films Help Chest; Last Call for Magic Show; Notes.

THOSE who enjoy tabulating their theatergoing schedules in advance should find material for their time tables in the announcement made yesterday by the local Warner Brothers executives of five major screen features to follow "Angel," which opens at the Earle today. These, it is said, will bring romance, comedy, music and drama to the silver sheets bearing the Warner name plate in the downtown area.

BELL.

First of the five is "The Great Garrick," starring Brian Aherne and Olivia de Havilland. This is a production in which both Mervyn LeRoy and James Whale have had a finger and presents a light-hearted story of England's great actor, David Garrick, and his visit to Paris to appear with the famous Comedie Francais company. There is a fruitful source of little used dramatic material in this personality and career.

Following Mr. Garrick's lively adventures will come a bright, modern comedy in which Leslie Howard and Bette Davis are intimated to outdo themselves—something other players have attempted to do from time to time without seriously close approximation of the Howard-Davis finesse, first vividly exemplified in "Of Human Bondage." Miss de Havilland also has a part of importance in this one.

The promised music will come to the fore in "I'll Take Romance," a Columbia production, with Grace Moore and Melvyn Douglas teamed for the first time. Some significance might attach to a reminder that this is the company that produced "The Awful Truth."

With Washington its scene and local theatergoers already apprised of its theme by two visits of Jane Cowl to the National in the stage version, "First Lady," next on the list, should arouse more than ordinary interest—especially since Kay Francis and Verree Teasdale appear in the rival feminine roles and Preston Foster and Walter Connolly as the handsome young Secretary of State and justice of the Supreme Court, respectively.

The fifth definitely booked attraction is "Submarine D-1," written by Comdr. Frank Wead and featuring in its cast Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris, Frank McHugh and Doris Weston. Comdr. Wead's stories invariably "have what it takes." If Wayne Morris can live up to the promise of "Kid Galahad," we will be saying the same thing about him before long.

A nice list to paste in anybody's hat.

* * * *

The American Legion will launch its local Armistice Week celebration with special ceremonies at 2 p. m., Sunday, at the Little Theater, in honor of the Washington premiere of "The Dead March," concerning which something was said here yesterday. Departmental Commander Tom Mason and other legion officials will attend the opening, escorted by the organization's national guard of honor. This picture is the one, the present state of the world being what it is, that ought to be seen by every adult resident not only of the National Capital, but of the entire United States. It carries a heavier punch than its biggest gun—and that is plenty big.

* * * *

Twenty-three years ago a husky young fellow began his career in the theater by going to work as a scene shifter in the Columbia Theater, when that F street landmark was playing legitimate road attractions instead of Mr. Loew's animated shadows. Since that remote day, this increasingly robust youngster has been a permanent fixture under the Loew management until at the present time it is he who is meant if reference is made to the "mayor of F street."

This could be no one else but Orangelo Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace, who is combining the celebration of his near quarter-century mark of service in the playhouse with the big eighteenth birthday of the house over which he presides and the presentation there of "Ali Baba Goes to Town," the film play that signalizes Eddie Cantor's completion of a full 25 years in American amusements.

During all these years, "Angie" has escorted to choice seats down front a long procession of leaders in all fields of endeavor, from Presidents and visiting foreign dignitaries down to that lowest form of animal life known as drama critics. During this week of anniversary observances he is carrying his hosting one step further.

Mr. Ratto, this week, has hit upon the happy scheme of entertaining as his guests all of the married couples in Washington whose eighteenth wedding anniversaries will fall during the run of "Ali Baba Goes to Town" at the Palace. This is in the nature of a tribute to the sturdy structure that stands at the corner of Thirteenth and F street, rather than anything personal aimed at either the amiable signor or the effervescent Cantor.

All that is necessary is to apprise Manager Ratto that your eighteenth wedding anniversary occurs during the run of "Ali Baba" and two of the best seats in the house will be laid aside for your gratuitous use.

I wish I had known about this 18 years ago!

* * * *

Two short-reel subjects that are—or should be—of timely interest to Washington film-gazers have recently been made in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series. One bears the title of "Soak the Poor;" the other, "Give 'til It Hurts." Both deal with the shrewdly despicable schemes by which racketeers prey upon organized charities and those who should derive the greatest good from them. "Give 'til It Hurts" was included as an "extra added attraction" at the Wednesday's double-barreled preview screenings for the drama desks and unmasked as clever a "get-rich-quick" device as ever got a gangster shot down in his tracks. "Soak the Poor" is of similar tenor. Unless you wish to be impelled to contribute generously to the Community Chest's annual campaign for funds, don't see either one!

* * * *

Those who may feel that "Damaged Lives," currently on view at the Rialto Theater, is treading on new and dangerous ground should bear in mind that this expository screen subject merely continues an educational drive that has been going on in the theaters for many years now.

"Damaged Lives" performs with slightly less melodramatic thunder and considerably more scientific detail the same function that Brieux' "Damaged Goods" served on the stage two decades or more ago. It refines and dignifies the processes which a long catalogue of other films executed years ago, looking to the same general end of checking the ravages of social diseases. One of the most famous of those earlier works was "Wild Oats," a sensational release in its day.

"Damaged Lives" possesses the conspicuous advantage of being the most thoughtful and most authentically helpful of any of these. I should hesitate to index this production as "entertainment," but place it high among the theater's contributions to a vital public service.

* * * *

It seems worthy of reiteration that the Gala Magic Show being presented this week at the Belasco Theater, for the benefit of the undernourished school children of the District, has only today and tomorrow to run—two matinee performances and two at night. Patrons of this entertainment will not only be serving a worthy and a needy cause that strikes close to home, but also will be regaled by an excellent demonstration of the baffling art of the magician. The foremost exponents available of illusion and prestidigitation are contributing their services to this program. They would deserve to be supported, even if the kids did not so urgently need to be fed.

Signs of the Times.

A window on a busy street in Northwest Washington bears this legend: "Little Success Cafe"—probably so named in the thought that an honest confession is good for the sole!

Violin Virtuoso on Earle Stage

Film Stage Spook Plumber Tapping

Spencer Tracy crawled under Sound Stage 24 and convinced a plumber that making motion pictures was more important than repairing a pipe.

The odd incident occurred when Joan Crawford and Tracy were rehearsing a love scene for "Mannequin."

All during the rehearsal, a faint tapping was heard.

"Sounds like a spook," said Joan.

"The microphone will pick up that noise," reported the soundman.

Director Frank Borzage sent his assistant, Lew Borzage, to investigate.

"It's a man working on a pipe," Lew informed the director. "He says he's been ordered to do the job and won't quit."

"I'll talk to him," said Tracy.

The star went to interview the plumber. Tracy was so successful that the plumber came up, watched the scene filmed, then went back and completed his job.

It's a Secret.

Few persons know that the first name of Warner Oland, creator of the Charlie Chan character in the popular series, is Johann. He is called Jack by intimate friends.

Whalen's Voice.

Michael Whalen, leading man, has never sung on the screen, although his barytone voice was a favorite in New York with WGBS and WABC listeners.

Fast Talker.

Ronald Reagan, former nationally known sports announcer, now a Warner Brothers featured player, can speak with perfect enunciation more than 400 words a minute. Actual count of a recording of one of his broadcasts revealed the feat.

Pugilists Guests Of 'Little Caesar'

Edward G. Robinson, currently playing in "The Last Gangster," arrived on the set surrounded by a group of prize-fighters, his guests to watch the picture. Robinson knows practically every fighter in the country, and usually obtains bit and extra roles for them in his pictures.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 4.—Tourists from the old home town dropped in today and I arranged for them to visit a studio. At M.-G.-M., we spent the better part of an hour on the Joan Crawford set, and when we left, I asked them what one thing had impressed them most. "The friendliness," they answered, after a moment's thought and cited several instances to prove the lack of formality between the set laborers and the stars. An electrician had casually addressed Miss Crawford as "Joan;" Spencer Tracy had spoken to a "grip" and called him "Joe."

SHIRLEY TEMPLE.

Well, I hate to disillusion anyone, but the fact is that Joan, meeting the electrician on the street tonight, would pass him up without a nod of recognition, and Spencer probably called the grip "Joe" because he didn't know his name and was not sufficiently interested to learn it. Hollywood does impress outlanders as a friendly town, but, sad to relate, it is all superficial.

Hollywood is in too much of a hurry to preserve the formalities. It is easier to take short-cuts. Old-timers take the display of friendliness for what it is worth. And don't feel sorry for that electrician. He neither expects Joan's recognition, nor wants it. And the "grip" is so concerned with his own job that he would much rather answer to "Joe" than take time out to inform Spencer that his real name is "George."

Guess it is true that every rose must have its thorns. Some time ago, when the summer sun was torturing us stay-at-homes, Shirley Temple went vacationing to Honolulu. Accompanying her with all of his expenses paid—went one of the studio's publicity scribes, and, thinking of that lucky stiff cavorting around on the cool beach of Waikiki, I worked myself into a self-pitying huff. But today, after hearing the story of his "pleasure" jaunt, I am reconciled. Poor guy—he worked so hard trying to protect Shirley from the swarming fans, autograph hunters and would-be interviewers that he came home pounds under weight! He had to go to the mountains for two weeks to regain his health!

One of Hollywood's most unusual success stories is that of a young girl who has established herself as an "Official Bureau of Missing Persons." Several years ago she read a fan magazine story about the curious crowds that hound every star who is unwise enough to reveal his vacation plans—and then and there her great idea was born. Suppose you are that famous idol, Clark Taylor. You want to hide away from "it all" for a month or two and you know that if you tip off your whereabouts to the people who should know, the people who shouldn't know will soon share the secret. The solution is easy—just give a $10 bill and detailed itinerary to this young lady, together with a list of the people who should be able to reach you in the event of an emergency. She will do the rest—and no dragon ever guarded a treasure-trove more carefully.

Douglass Montgomery—always a sucker for brilliant colors—bought a beautiful piece of Scotch plaid the other day. As yardage, it looked a trifle gaudy, but Doug bravely took it to his tailor and ordered it made into a suit. Came the day when it was finished and Doug took it home, put it on, and then, mustering the Montgomery courage, he grimly descended the stairs and burst in on his startled family. "Well," he demanded, "give me your frank opinion, should I wear it or not?" There was silence and then, "Douglass," said one of his aunts, solemnly, "Wear it by all means—but only at home. We all love you here!"

Bob Breen's Radio Dates Postponed

The necessity of traveling far from Hollywood for the filming of Bobby Breen's RKO Radio pictures this fall has caused the postponement of his coast-to-coast radio programs until January 1.

Bobby's current picture, "Hawaii Calls," is being filmed by Producer Sol Lesser in Honolulu, while the one to follow, "Lucky Star," will be made largely in San Francisco—making it impossible to assemble a radio cast until later.

Family Trait.

Joel McCrea, portraying a pioneer express messenger in Frank Lloyd's new production, "Wells Fargo," is maintaing a family tradition. His grandfather was identified with the first stage coach line operated from San Bernardino, Calif., to Los Angeles.

Once 'Strong' Man.

Michael Curtiz, director, never misses a circus. There's a reason. In Europe he was a strong man with a circus.

Building Group Urged to Seek New D. C. Code

Regulations Are Obsolete, New Yorker Asserts to Congress Here.

Reconstruction of the District's building code was proposed as a major objective of the newly organized Washington Building Congress at its first annual dinner meeting last night in the Cosmos Club.

The congress was addressed by Thomas S. Holden, president of the New York Building Congress, who pointed to the District's building regulations as obsolete and in need of revision.

Outlining what he considered should be the aims of the new organization, Holden warned against participation in labor disputes. He urged the congress to concentrate on obtaining legislation beneficial to the building industry.

He also cautioned the group against permitting the organization to become overbalanced in its representation of various units of the building industry. All groups of labor and management must be represented on the congress' membership roll, he said.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, the District Engineer Commissioner, promised the congress the co-operation of the District government and assured it that most of the aims outlined were approved by the Commissioners.

Hector M. Airing, second vice president of the congress, presided at the dinner.

In Pittsburgh to address a regional safety engineering conference, the Governor said, "I still wish that Hauptmann was alive."

Cantor Latest Comic to Josh New Deal Rule

Singing Comedian Has Fun With Political Scene in Palace Film.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Gene Towne, Graham Baker and Gene Fowler, adapted to the screen by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, starring Eddie Cantor, with Tony Martin, Roland Young, June Lang, Louise Hovick, John Carradine, Virginia Field, Alan Dinehart, Douglas Dumbrille, Maurice Cass, Warren Hymer, Stanley Fields, Paul Hurst, Ferdinand Gottschalk, the Pearl Twins, the Peters Sisters and Jeni Le Gon. Music by Gordon and Revel. Directed by David Butler. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, November 2, at Loew's Palace Theater.

In this high-geared musical extravaganza the New Deal moves to ancient Bagdad.

The trick of turning back the centuries—ten of them—is accomplished by the familiar dream device that transports an ardent young autograph hunter from a motion-picture location on the outskirts of Hollywood, where an Oriental subject is being filmed, to the actual scene of the camera play in the year 937 A. D. In this strange time and place Al Babson comes upon a Sultan whose subjects are starving at the gates of the palace while he luxuriates in bounteous plenty, with more dyspeptic abundance at his beck and call than his 300 wives and considerable official entourage can possibly consume—the "halves" and the "have-nots," to get at once into the political analogy.

With this basic situation upon which to rear their structure of good-natured laughs, "swingy" music and velvet-gloved burlesque, the Messrs. Gene Towns, Graham Baker and Gene Fowler, authors of the story on which the screen play is based, have "gone to town," along with Ali Baba, and applied to the dim past all of the novelties in present-day political philosophy to be found in the current American scene.

Parodies Timely Topics.

As is the case in the stage satire, "I'd Rather Be Right," taxation, direct relief, WPA projects, governmental subsidy and all of the other contemporaneous problems of government are made the topics of Oriental experimentation. Things finally reach the pass, owing to romantic developments that have been incorporated in the plot, where Master Al Babson—called Ali Baba by his new associates because his name sounds to them like "Al Bab's son"—persuades the Sulton to abdicate the throne and run for president of his country. By his inspired management of his master's campaign, the jumping-jack Ali Baba gets himself elected instead. Things look pretty dark for all concerned until Ali Baba discovers that Omar the Rug-Maker's grounded masterpiece, on which he has expended a lifetime of weaving, is, indeed, a magic carpet that will fly at the word "inflation" and return to earth at "deflation." Riding this miraculous bit of floor covering, Ali Baba is able to disperse an invading army and bring bitter discomfiture upon his arch enemy, the palace conspirator who wouldn't mind being a bit of a ruler on his own.

Eddie Cantor, in the title role is an engagaing young Arab. His best moments, it seems to me, are those in which he discovers the genesis of Herlem music in the weird tooting of the court musicians whose incomprehensible lingo he interprets in the amazing jargon of the popular "scat" mouthings of a day 1,000 years away. His songs are catchy numbers that enable him to introduce a group of clever specialists in the Pearl Sisters, harem dancers; the Peter Sister, dark brown blues singers, if you can do with a mixed color scheme, and Jeni Le Gon, gyrating dancer. Some of the supposedly comic lines fall just a little flat, but in the main, the fun is of high velocity. Unlike George M. Cohan in "I'd Rather Be Right," Cantor offers an occasional palpable imitation of President Roosevelt's words and mannerisms.

Notable Supporting Cast.

The supporting cast is an illustrious one for a subject of this flippant and nonsensical nature. Roland Young is the Sultan, Douglas Dumbrille the Prince Musah, with delusions of grandeur; John Carradine a convenient cynic, Alan Dinehart the director on location. June Lang the Sultan's daughter and Louise Hovick—the former Gypsy Rose Lee—Musah's statuesque accomplice. Of the entire group Miss Hovick is the only one who won't do, otherwise than as an effective photographic subject. It is surprising to find Maurice Cass, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Paul Hurst, Stanley Fields, Warren Hymer and Charles Lane in parts that are scarcely more than "bits."

The charade ends with a Hollywood preview of the film at the Cathay Circle Theater and an unforseen twist that is amusingly novel—with the star having a deal of fun himself, but not so much as he had with "Swing is Here to Stay," the catchiest tune Gordon and Revel turned out in their score of five songs.

Pete Smith contributes another of his short-reel sports subjects to the supplementary program in "Sport on Ice" and a new release in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series, 'Soak the Poor," exposes another money racket to add further variety and interest to the bill. "Events of the Day" is the third auxiliary of a feature that probably will tickle many funny bones.

Fire Extinguished At Benning Track; 38 Horses Saved

Fire partially destroyed Benning race track superintendent's house yesterday as the flames from the burning building endangered the lives of 38 horses quartered nearby in stables. Lately the building was being used as a boarding house for the stable hands.

The fire, believed to have been caused by a faulty chimney, was discovered by Florence Jackson, a colored waitress, at work in the kitchen. Employes began removing the animals from the stable, about 20 feet away.

Firemen summoned by an employe soon extinguished the blaze after slight damage.

Recently the track has been the center of Congressional interest, when the bill legalizing racing was before both bodies.

New York, Nov. 4.

EXPENSE: Gene Fowler is on his way back to Hollywood, somewhat disillusioned. He was ill during his stay there, and a number of friends visited him. During one of these sessions a messenger boy delivered a package and stated the charges: "One forty." . . . Fowler opened the package and found therein a suit for his wife. "It's really marvelous what a person can buy for so little," he elated, tossed two bills to the messenger and said: "There's two. Buy yourself a mistress with the change." . . . The messenger grinned, left, and five minutes later returned. "You made a mistake, Mr. Fowler," he stated. "You gave me $2. When I told you the charge was 'One forty,' I meant $140!"

Columbia

Combining romance, comedy and violent melodrama, "High, Wide and Handsome," Paramount's pretentious picturization of events surorunding the dicsovery of oil in western Pennsylvania, when that industry was new and the railroads were still young, returned to F street yesterday as chief feature of the new week's screen bill at Loew's Columbia Theater.

Already having enjoyed a week at the Capitol, this costarring vehicle for Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott, remembered for their earlier joint work in the film version of "Roberta," in addition to its divergent dramatic content, also embodies a lilting musical score by Jerome Kern, with lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II. For the greater part, the songs are sung by Miss Dunne and Dorothy Lamour, appearing as an outcast from the "shanty boat." Miss Dunne, of course, is the musical mainspring of the picture.

The action is uniformly swift and occasionally cyclonic in its melodramatic intensity. This more exciting movement of the plot is hinged upon the battle for supremacy between the Pennsylvania farmers, on whose lands oil has been struck, and the railroad barons who scheme to control the fields through the medium of exorbitant freight rates. The gentler romantic developments are the outgrowth of a chance meeting between the youthful leader of the native tillers of the soil and a medicine show girl, stranded by accident on his grandmother's property. The two elements are merged with spectacular effectiveness, if not with complete conviction.

The narrative reaches its final tempestuous climax in a race against time to complete a pipe line that will retain their franchise for the farmers. To complete this seemingly impossible task, a circus is recruited to assist the honest toilers in fighting off the hired thugs of the railroad magnates. This scene is less thrillingly dramatic than it is grotesquely amusing.

The stars are supported by a long cast that is considerably better than the material with which it has been provided. Raymond Walburn, Charles Bickford, Alan Hale, Elizabeth Patterson, William Frawley and scores more contribute to the expansive dimensions that Paramount has given Mr Hammerstein's story.

The bill is completed by the usual short-reel subjects and "Events of the Day."

Rialto.

"DAMAGED LIVES." Weldon Productions picturization of a romantic drama, pointing the dangers of social diseases, with Lyman Williams, Charlotte Merriam, Harry Myers, Dorothea Roberts, Jason Robards and others, followed by a scientific screen talk, illustrated with charts, diagrams and action scenes depicting the diagnosis, treatment and prevalence of these ailments. Reviewed Thursday afternoon at the Rialto Theater.

While "Damaged Lives" ostensibly is presented as screen entertainment, it is primarily an admonitory preachment on the ravages of startlingly prevalent social diseases, their symptoms, treatment and possible cure, forming another chapter in the national campaign being waged to stamp out these sinister afflictions and shatter the "conspiracy of silence" and the secrecy that so often impede their remedy.

The story of the film is one of youthful ignorance, fright and despair, ameliorated finally by the hopeful encouragement of skillful and reliable medical advice. It engages the services of a considerable list of known Hollywood players and is acted, directed and produced with illuminating frankness and utmost discretion. The subject matter is such, obviously, that attendance is restricted to adult audiences. Its treatment is of such a nature, however, that the intelligent approach to topics usually taboo in mixed drawing room conversations removes the necessity of segregating the sexes.

The pseudo-tragic narrative that "Damaged Lives" reveals with such clarity is interpreted by Lyman Williams, Charlotte Merriam, Jason Robards, Harry Myers, Dorothea Roberts and other expert players who never permit themselves to violate the spirit of social service in which the film was produced.

The public exhibition of the picture is indorsed by the American Social Hygiene Association, the United States Public Health Service, the National Parent-Teacher Association, the Federal Council of Churches and various city departments of health, including, I believe, the National Capital's.

The scientifically sound—and appropriately brief—explanation of the proper treatment of syphilis, gonorrhea and other veneral diseases is based on actual cases under treatment, laboratory tests and biological examinations and analyses that make clear the great advances that have been achieved by the medical fraternity in combating these ravaging social blights. Not the least impressive warning is that directed at the neglect that too often renders cure extremely difficult, if not impossible, and the evil consequences that may result to generations yet unborn from such indifference to the seriousness of these subtle plagues.

The presentation of the Rialto's bill, which opened to the public yesterday, was supplemented last night at 8:30 by personal talks from the stage by Mr. Ray Everett, secretary of the District Social Hygiene Society, and other crusaders in the same admirable cause. N. B. B.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Unmarried, Expecting a Child, Living as 'Common-Law' Wife, 22-Year-Old Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 22 years old. Last May I met a young man of 28, married but separated from his wife. I fell in love with him at first sight. He told me he loved me; not his wife. I gave up everyone for him. I loved him so much I could not refuse him anything . . . Now I am to become the mother of his child. He had expected to get his divorce in October but cannot obtain it until February. He suggested marrying me anyway and keeping it a secret until after his divorce, so I left home and came away with him. Now he has failed to keep his promise. He told me to live with him as his common-law wife, which I am doing, for the baby's sake.

* * * *

Now, he speaks constantly of his wife, of how pretty and sweet she is; what a good housekeeper; that he could never have done her any such wrong as he has done me; and yet he says he doesn't love her; that I am a jealous little fool for thinking he does. He doesn't want me to touch him nor talk to him unless he just happens to be in the mood. He suggested I get rid of the baby, but this I refuse to do. I think he is tired of me, but I can't go back to my home town. Mother wouldn't want me there. She would die of disgrace. But I can't stand this situation much longer. It's driving me crazy.

* * * *

He criticizes the way I walk, the way I look, the way I talk. He used to be very sweet to me, but not any more. He goes out and leaves me all alone. I have no friends. I try to be good to him in every way and am careful not to spend any more of his money than can be helped. My grocery bill is just a little over a dollar a week and still he complains.

Please help me get out of this mess. I am not a bad woman and please don't think I am. I want to do what is right, but I don't know how to get out of all this trouble. I have done the only honest thing I could think of under the circumstances. Isn't there some place I could go, or something I could do, until everything is over? I tried to find work, but failed; and I won't be able to work much longer, anyway. I have no money, no mother who loves me and no friends I can turn to—all because of him. Please help me and I promise I will always go straight after this. Yours truly, C. J.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR C. J.: I have discussed your problem with the head of the child welfare division of the Division of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia, and she agrees with me that it will be best for the child in the long run if his father can be aided and encouraged in developing a sense of responsibility for both the child and you, as its mother. Such a sense of responsibility will not be developed if you run away from him now, simply because the going is rather rocky and he no longer seems to care for you as romantically and tenderly as he once did.

* * * *

After all, he has given you something to bank on and build on in showing a disposition to provide, however inadequately, and to share, however grudgingly, a home of sorts during your pregnancy, and in acknowledging you as his wife, even if only his "common-law" wife. Only an immature sort of man would have indulged, with so little regard for biological consequences, in an illicit affair with a young girl, when he meant to marry her yet was not free to do so. That he is not altogether irresponsible, however, is proven by the fact that he has come to your rescue to the extent he has. Many another man would have taken to his heels on learning you were pregnant, and still others might have blusteringly denied responsibility, insinuating that there was more than one lover in your life.

* * * *

Since he is by nature somewhat irresponsible, it is to be expected that this disagreeable responsibility should vex him sorely, so that he rasps at you, doubts his very love for you, and avoids your anxious-eyed society as much as possible. But so long as he doesn't abandon you altogether, I think you can well afford to endure his moody indifference, with the idea in mind of giving your child a father's name and social protection.

* * * *

Perhaps if you were to avail yourself of the advice and guidance of Miss Edith Holloway, of the Family Service Association, 1022 Eleventh street northwest, telephone District 6883, you might achieve a better understanding with the man concerning future plans. For some plans should be made. Things shouldn't be permitted to drift along aimlessly and purposelessly from day to day. Something should be done to bring about as speedy a divorce as possible, if he is still willing to marry you. If he isn't willing to marry you, he should make this intention clear. In the latter eventuality, it will be just as well to leave him at once.

* * * *

In that case, you may go to the Florence Crittenton Home at 4758 Reservoir road northwest, telephone EMerson 4300, and talk with Miss Ann Rogers, the case worker there. The Florence Crittenton Mission, as it was originally named, was established in the 1880's to afford social and medical protection to the unmarried, expectant mother during the months she is waiting for her child to be born. When the child is born, both mother and child continue to receive this protection until the latter is 6 months old. Then the mother is helped in rehabilitating her life, providing she has no family or friends to turn to. If the mother prefers to relinquish her child to foster parents, she is told the proper agencies to approach in placing her child for adoption.

* * * *

But my best advice to you is to talk with Miss Holloway before making any decision or taking some other step you may later regret. You will find her a real friend in need, and most understanding besides. She will help you find a solution to this problem that is not only satisfactory to you, but fair to the child and the father at the same time. Your dissatisfaction with the man may be partly without foundation, in the sense that he is doing the very best he can while you are pettishly expecting more than can reasonably be expected in the circumstances. She may show you how to turn this experience to account in developing a more mature personality for yourself and a better understanding of the man's side of the case. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Aids to That Moulded Figure—Stout and Slender

IT IS proportion, not size, that determines a beautiful figure this season, and whether you are a size 46 or 32, you can have a pleasing silhouette if the foundation garment is well chosen. The garment below, designed for the full figure, is of brocade with lastex sides and gussets under the lace brassiere; a feature is the inside figure control, planned to mold the diaphragm and stomach. At bottom, is a streamlined garment of satin lastex and lace, created for the slim figure. The silver lame evening gown (right) is styled to complement either type of figure. Note silver metal leaves at neck and waistline, draped bodice, skirt and wrists of long fitted sleeves.

Harvest Hues Mark New Sport Frocks

New York (AP).—The fashion world has scored a touchdown in clothes for football games. Outfits this year are smart in line and spiked with color. They are comfortable and warm as well.

Since most women expect to wear their football clothes for a good many other occasions, the fashion mart has evolved a wealth of costumes which are equally good campus and country clothes, or which are ready for cocktail parties after stadium struggles.

Leading the campus-country set is a host of slim wool frocks in warm harvest and autumn leaf colors fastened with football buttons or marked with horizontal bodice bars in the colors of your favorite team. Next come a series of trim wool suits (greens, rusts and blacks) on whose lapels little twin gold metal goal posts can make smart accents.

Exercise Aids To Overcome Poor Digestion

Better Elimination, Slow Eating Also Helps Bring Relief.

New York (AP).—Indigestion is a complaint of three out of five American business women.

Miss Catherine Van Rensselaer, director of physical education at the American Woman's Association in New York, who has to cope with hundreds of cases of it, says most indigestion is caused by carelessness.

It can be cured by correcting digestive and elimination habits and doing a certain amount of exercise.

It can be cured by correcting digestive elimination habits and doing a certain amounto f exercise.

"Commuter's breakfast is often the cause of the trouble," Miss Van Rensselaer says. "Breakfast should take at least 20 minutes. And dieting or not—I think it should be ample.

"Lunch should be light and eaten slowly. Dinner should be the most leisurely meal of all."

Miss Van Rensselaer suggests these exercises to strengthen the muscles that control digestion and elimination:

One is "trunk circling." Put your hands on your hips. Describe a half circle with the trunk, leaning as far as possible in each direction. Five times from right to left and five times from left to right will be enough.

Another is "knee circling." Lie on your back. Bring both knees up from the right and around to the left, letting the legs extend out and down as you complete the circle.

The third involves relaxing from the waist. Let the upper half of your body swing toward the floor thoroughly relaxed. Let your fingertips touch your toes—one, two, three, four times—and then return to a standing position.

Autumn Leaf Design Featured on Gowns

Paris (U.P.).—Stitched quilting and autumn leaves of felt or gold and silver kid are favorite decorations for daytime and evening costumes in the winter collection of Jeanne Lanvin.

Coats with a military air are introduced for daytime wear with rows of brass buttons fastening at either side of broad panels of contrasting hue. Black coats are shown with panels of red or green, and orange is used on coat of green with matching green hat.

Corset Stylists Contend Beautiful Form Is a Matter of Proportion Rather Than Size; Say Even a 44 Can Be Attractive.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

ARE YOU a problem figure? The majority of women are, according to corset stylists, and since this is true the wise thing to do when purchasing a new foundation garment is to have a scientific figure analysis and then buy a garment which has been fitted to you properly. A new method called "figure-ology" has been evolved by a leading corset manufacturer and is being demonstrated in S. Kann's store by an experienced corsetiere. The figure is charted according to measurements and individual idiosyncrasies before the wearer is permitted to try on a garment, and she is allowed to keep a duplicate chart for future reference. By this method, she may study her own figure imperfections, and develop a better silhouette.

Matter of Proportion

A beautiful figure, contend stylists, is a matter of proportion rather than size; even a size 44, they maintain, can be smart and attractive if it is corseted correctly. They also insist that you can do anything you want with your figure if foundation garments are chosen in accordance with the wanted figure line. Girdles, bras and foundations, which are too tight or too short, are not only a menace to acquiring a smooth and molded silhouette, but actually do harm to the figure. The danger points that need corrective lines are the diaphragm, back, thighs, abdomen and bustline. Bulges and superfluous flesh in these places mar the chances of obtaining the current silhouette which emphasizes flowing lines and molded contours.

Whatever your size or proportions, strive for a longer waistline; it gives the body younger lines and also gives the illusion of tallness to a short plump figure. This is accomplished best in corsetry, say the experts, by wearing a girdle built a bit high and a long-line brassiere. Whether or not you select a one-piece garment or a girdle and bra is a matter of personal preference, and, of course, depends, too, on the individual body lines and contours. Both are considered modern and correct, and both are now styled with the latest ideas in smart lines to harmonize with the current silhouette of the frock or suit. This makes it absolutely necessary to be fitted with a new foundation garment of some kind, in order to wear the new styles; otherwise the effect is incongruous.

Fitting Hint Offered.

Every woman sits a different length, because of the varying lengths of legs and torso; consequently the girdle should be fitted for the entire length of the body (sitting and standing). Modern corsetry takes into consideration the bone structure of the figure and molds the flesh into smooth, suave and controlled lines. The majority of women start out in life with an average figure, but for various reasons—chiefly neglect and wrong selection of foundation garments—the figure develops into something out-of-proportion and unlovely. One should not be indifferent about such imperfections as bulging diaphragms, pendulous stomach, thick thighs and padded hips, say the corset stylists, because all of these and other ungainly figure defects can be corrected.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Books on Diet.

There is little excuse for any more books on diet. It has been a favorite subject the last ten years or so, and the result is that there are, to my own knowledge, at least half a dozen good books for the laity, instructing them in that part of science, and an equal number of technical books for the physician and professional dietitian.

In spite of the somewhat crowded state of the field, I welcome one more book on the subject, "Man, Bread and Destiny," by C. C. and S. M. Furnas. Mr. C. C. Furnas, who is an M. D., published last year an extremely lively volume called "The Next Hundred Years—the Unfinished Business of Science," which outlines his idea of the way our universe is to be improved in the near future. This present volume is written in an equally engaging tone, and is all the better from not being written from the viewpoint of the physician.

Starting from the premise that Freud is wrong and that the great motivator of the human race has been the empty stomach, they outline the physiology of food—which they admit is as tangled as a fishing line in a bush—but manage to get a fresh viewpoint on many aspects of the nutritional field.

Quantity in food they consider first. "Young hellions of either sex seldom overeat," but "after 30 things are different in many ways. From middle age on everything is either 'illegal, immoral or fattening.'" (Alexander Woollcott in one of his duller moments.)

Everyone in the United States, according to these gentlemen, eats one-fourth more than is good for him. "When I go to a dinner party, I see the incarnate forms of gout, apoplexy and fever coaxing their victims to take one more slice," wrote a gloomy New Englander long ago. "Disease lurks behind every sirloin."

This same misanthrope proposed a "Society for the Suppression of Eating," whose duties were:

(a) To obtain from the Massachusetts Medical Society a statement of the quantity of food most convenient for a healthy man.

(b) Offer a premium for the best treatise setting forth the pernicious effects of overeating.

(c) Members shall pledge to go without dinner once a week.

(d) No member shall eat more than once a day.

(e) No member shall eat after 8 at night.

When last heard from the society was not flourishing, and I am not so sure that it isn't a good thing. Warnings against food, I am inclined to think, are far less valuable than they seem to be.

It was a very good doctor, Baron Alibert, a crony of Brillat-Savarini, who said that the gossip about a man digging his grave with his teeth was a bit of professional jealousy—spread by the pick and shovel.

Bright Color Contrasts Are Used by Vionnet

Paris (U.P.).—Brilliant color contrasts and the use of soft, rich materials elaborately draped are characteristics of the Vionnet collection of winter costumes.

Bright rust and green suits with belted jackets and simple, dark short-sleeved blouses of satin and silk jersey are outstanding among "casual" clothes, and dark suits are shown with contrasting light blouses.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

By Alice Hughes

THERE'S NO field of activity into which women have plunged with more zip and ability than the radio—and I don't mean as singers, but as commentators and special spouters on their various rackets. Where once the other angels were limited to thrilling "Kees me, kees me, a-gain!" now they lash out, and eloquently, on politics, styles, home problems, the care and feeding of the young—and name practically any other!

ALICE HUGHES

The success of Mary Margaret McBride, who as "Martha Deane" talks an hour every afternoon on feminine matters, is already radio history. A great girl, and one of my valued friends, Mary has become one of the air's most remarkable personalities. The brilliant Dorothy Thompson and beauteous Gretta Palmer are two other aces who work out of local mikes, and every section of the nation boasts women radioracles to whom it is devoted.

* * * *

One of the most interesting of our air women is Miss Kathryn Cravens, once actually a blackface comedienne, who has now developed into a top-flight commentator on one of the biggest net works. Only the other day I saw her putting handsome young Tyrone Power through the third degree. She's large and blonde, and now an excellent reporter in her line. She asked the youthful dream prince about his mother, whom he astonishingly calls "Mother," and scribbled notes. Her voice is pleasant, and still carries more than a trace of the Texas where she was born and raised. Starting in 1931 at a St. Louis station, she was soon brought here by a big motor man for his program, and now she works like crazy on her thrice-weekly broadcast. Studying for a nervous collapse, perhaps, but loving her work. Lucky Kathryn—and lucky the blokes who hire her!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The violent campaign being waged here to exile dogs from apartment houses is meeting with a vicious counterattack by pup-doters. They have a "protective association," which recently bulletined that "dogs are an integral part of American city life, and should be provided with necessary conveniences." At present there are only our crowded sidewalks, and oh my goodness!

* * * *

Dear Noel Coward just can't keep away from work! In spite of his announced intention to lay off on account of his health, dear Null is reported doing an operetta—probably for Grace Moore, who wants it . . .

* * * *

Queen Ethel Barrymore, who 12 months ago retired from the thutuh "for all time," is now rehearsing like mad for Sid Howard's new play, "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," a Theater Guild opus . . .

* * * *

Did you hear about the tiny tug, The Queen Mary, getting into a jam with the law the other day? Seems that the Queen unlawfully dumped refuse into the Hudson, and since there's no jail in town big enough to hold her, the old girl had a $500 fine slapped across her stern. She paid up and sailed away, promising to throw her rubbish far out at sea . . .

* * * *

I hear that Claire Boothe, who tore off that smash feline play, "The Women," is now doing another show called "The Men," and if that's so, kindly save me two on the izzle for opening night! That will be something, for this girl can write like a high-speed comet about the human comedy and its comedians . . .

* * * *

Leave it to New York housemaids from Harlem to give things and people a name! Sadie, once famous among my friends for the way she could double my telephone voice, called me "the general," behind my back, and now I learn that my present Elta refers to the helpmate as "the count"—why, I don't know. He has no mustache, and the poor soul can barely count to ten! But there it is. Did you know that New Yorkers' pet yarns are about their maids, not kids?

One of my pals on Riverside drive tells me that the era of studied "sloppy dress" among college girls seems over. From her window she can study the Barnard co-eds, whose socks now fit snugly, whose tweed suits are in press, and whose everhatless hair is now neat. In short, "collegiate" is no longer a synonym for that careless, casual look. The girls have slicked up!

Writers, Educators Lead List of Noted American Women

Women writers predominate in the second volume of "American Women," just issued by The American Publications, Inc., of Los Angeles, and, which contains biographies of 7,851 women who have reached positions of importance in the business and professional world.

The number of women listed as "writers" is 929, the number of "authors," 516. There are 58 poets and 6 novelists. Education ranks second to literature. There are 405 professors, 401 general educators and then 375 librarians and college deans.

Alma White, of Zarepath, N. J., founder and president of the board of trustees of the Pillar of Fire Church, is the only woman listed as a bishop. Ethel T. Holland, of the Evening Post staff, Marion, Ill., has the distincton of being the only woman city editor.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Contentment Is the Best Beautifier, Believes Mary Pickford.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE BEST beautifier in the world? Contentment of the mind! At least, that is the conviction of lovely Mary Pickford, lovely beloved of silent screen audiences who went again and again to laugh and weep over her in such performances as "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Madame Butterfly."

Miss Pickford takes her philosophy with a flavor of gayety, however, and is neither resigned nor humorless. She goes right along to say:

"Irritation will upset even a cow. When the animal is nervous its milk of sleep. Once, following the company use to advertise 'milk from contented cows?' Well, we like to think human beings are at least as sensitive! No wonder one's skin breaks out during a nervous upset I have noticed that people who are constantly irritated usually have an irritation of the skin also."

Very Little Changed.

Except for the short curls, Miss Pickford has changed very little since her silent film triumph. Perhaps the main reason is that she really puts into practice her beliefs about serenity. She also likes plenty of sleep. Once, folowing the completion of a picture, she slept 20 hours straight. She sticks to the old-fashioned combination of soap and water for her skin and gets constant exercise by making her muscles work every time she leans over to fasten a shoe or gets up from a chair.

By exercising the right muscles correctly in the performance of numerous daily tasks, Miss Pickford believes, it is possible to keep supple and firm. Next time you climb the stairs make an exercise of it. Stretch your body up tall and try to move the hip muscles. When you rise from a chair don't throw the burden of the effort on your hands and hoist yourself up. Make the leg muscles do the work.

"I won't say that this sort of program could reduce a person who is overweight," Miss Pickford said, "But it seems to keep me in condition. I like to walk and I like golf—but golf is so bad for the disposition!" (She is consistent about this serenity!)

Likes to Stretch.

Miss Pickford's favorite form of calisthenics is stretching. She always stretches thoroughly in the morning before getting up, and sometimes bends down and touches her hands to her toes while sitting up in bed. Proof that she gets adequate exercise is to be found in her measurements: Height, 5 feet ¾ of an inch; weight, 108 pounds; bust, 34 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 35 inches.

Another bit of her beauty wisdom which I am passing along to you is this:

"Don't get upset about anything," advises Mary Pickford.

Every Normal Movement Should Be an Exercise, Says Film Idol.

"I believe that we are our thoughts personified, and if any woman will think of herself as beautiful she can be. I once knew a woman who had been ill for a long time. She was emaciated and old looking, and she couldn't gain weight. Her daughters took away all the pictures of her looking thin and worn and put up those which had been taken when she was younger. They put one of these pictures at the foot of her bed, where it replaced a full-length mirror, and gradually this woman began to change. She gained weight and looked as she had before her illness."

As Miss Pickford remarked . . . "People may think you are a little 'touched' when you say anything about this psychology, but it really helps."

. . . Well, if you don't think you have a lovely figure, you will never have one!

Informal Tea Is Given By Senora de los Rios

Women From Diplomatic, Official and Social Circles Take Part in Colorful Party; Argentine Envoy Finds He Is Only Man There and Flees.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

A gracious hostess mingling among her guests with the serenity and charm characteristic of old Spain . . . a small and congenial gathering in a colorful and handsomely furnished embassy . . . delicious refreshments, and a glimpse of a treasured collection of dolls fashioned by loving hands of one of the most interesting women in Washington—these were highlights of a small tea given yesterday afternoon by Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador.

HOPE R. MILLER

From the minute you stepped into the reception hall, where a long richly carved table centers the room and tall chairs stand against crimson-brocaded wall hangings, you knew this affair was going to be different, smaller, more intimate than typical teas given by diplomatic hostesses.

Receiving her guests informally in the drawing room, Senora de los Rios moved about from one group to another, smiling here, joining in a bit of conversation there, and seeming, on the whole, to enjoy her delightful party as much as anyone—which is saying a lot. Her sweeping frock of deep blue velvet, cut with long, full sleeves gathered in at the wrists gave her a regal appearance, which was enhanced by the braid of hair circling her head, coronet style.

Of women from diplomatic, official and residential circles, there were a number one expects to meet at such a party, and each guest was attired in a manner that might inspire a fashion-minded writer to go into detailed description; but there was too much else to notice for me to take note, merely, of who was present and what each one wore.

Doll-Filled Cabinets Attract Much Attention

There was, for instance, a flower- and food-laden table covered with scores of dishes designed to make the most rigid dieters forget all about their figures. Opening off the dining room, there was a patio, fragrant with flowers and evergreens, reminding one of the beauty and charm of a beautiful European country before war clouds broke above it. And, most interesting of all, there were two cabinets—one in the drawing room and the other in the spacious, inviting library—filled with dolls fashioned by the nimble fingers of 84-year-old Dona Laura Giner de los Rios, mother of Senora de los Rios.

Dona Laura was not present at the party, but upstairs in her room, she well might have heard the guests below exclaiming over her dolls, standing on dainty pedestals of varnished wood, velvet and silk, or reclining, as does her exquisite "Madame Recamier," on a fragile couch, also made by hand. Every guest who saw them admired the dolls, but perhaps few knew that their creator, Dona Laura, is also an authority on etiquette, and is, in fact, the Emily Post of Spain.

While the party was principally a feminine affair, two men were also present, although one made a hasty departure. The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe A. Espil, came with his wife, but upon discovering no other man in the gathering, left almost as soon as he arrived. Had he stayed a few minutes longer, there would have been another male guest to keep him company. George Hogg, young Britisher, who graduated from Oxford in June, and is now on a hitch-hiking tour of this country, came with Mrs. Howell Moorhead, whom he is visiting.

Male Guest Is Extremely Popular

From the time he arrived Mr. Hogg was the center of an interested circle. It was whispered around that he is a nephew of Miss Muriel Lester, famous feminine preacher and lecturer, who visited here last spring, and also, that he is in America to make a first-hand study of labor conditions.

"Just ahead of the duke and duchess—a kind of forerunner," he observed by way of answering several questions jokingly propounded. In a more serious veing he averred he was interested in surveying the labor situation as closely as possible, and that he considered hitch-hiking the length and breadth of the land as the best way to do it. He already has negotiated a 2,000-mile stretch by this method and will be off soon on another, headed toward the West Coast. He expects to finish his one-man survey the middle of December.

On all sides yesterday Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, was being congratulated on her birthday, which, incidentally, was celebrated in first-rate fashion last evening at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley at the Mayflower. "And how many congratulatory messages and presents have you reecived today?" she was asked. "Oh, not so many," she replied, with eyes twinkling. I happened to know, however, the number of both mounted toward the 500 mark.

Mrs. William E. Borah, who was also present, can talk with authority on birthday presents and parties, having had two of the latter given in her honor this year, with gifts presented at each one.

Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Mrs. Moorhead and Senora de Pittaluga, wife of the second secretary of the Spanish Embassy, assisted at the tea table yesterday. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, was among the guests, and looked particularly lovely in her trim black frock trimmed with a girdle of green and cerise and a small towering black hat. Mme. Espil, as usual, was worthy of fashion note in a dress of brown brushwool set off with a black veiled hat. Mrs. Gardner Jackson was glimpsed chatting with Mrs. Edwin S. Smith and Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister, was here, there and everywhere, talking with just about everyone present before the party was over.

Among others there were Senora de Pastoriza, Mrs. Presenton Macgoodwin, in an attractive green ensemble, Senora Eleanor Gabler de Campbell, Mrs. Fred Britten and Mrs. John Herrick.

Barbara Bradley Will Make Debut At Tea on Nov. 18

Cards are out for another Capital debut—that of Miss Barbara Bradley, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton Bradley, will present her at a tea at their home, 1706 Twenty-first street, Thursday, November 18, from 4 until 7 o'clock.

Miss Bradley is a member of one of Washington's oldest residential families. Her relatives gave their name to Bradley Farms, Bradley lane and Bradley Hills. She attended Madeira School here and is a cousin of Miss Mary Parish Bradley and of Mary Woodworth Bradley, who married one of the Blagdens—member of another old Washington family—and is now living in New York State.

2d Book Appears By Mrs. Coblentz

A second book from the pen of Mrs. W. W. Coblentz, known professionally as Catherine Cate Coblentz, is published today by the Atlantic Monthly Press. Called "The Blue and Silver Necklace," the volume is a juvenile story of the Southwest, centering around a Hopi girl, but also bringing in Navajo and white characters.

"The intent of the book—and I hope it is carefully hidden in the story interest—is to contrast three types of civilization dwelling closely together," Mrs. Coblentz said.

A little more than a year ago, the author's first book, "Animal Pioneers," was published by the same company, its purpose being, as Mrs. Coblentz expressed it, to "freshen stodgy facts about history."

The author is the wife of Dr. W. W. Coblentz, physicist at the United States Bureau of Standards, and is widely known in Washington.

Capital Chosen For Velvet Ball

N. Y. Social Event Moved to D. C.; Will Benefit Lunch Fund.

The Velvet Ball, which has been an outstanding social event each season in New York when held there for the benefit of the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, is coming to Washington and the New York Velvet Ball has been canceled. The ball, which will take place January 6, is being sponsored by the Citizens Permanent Committee to raise money for school lunches.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be honorary chairman of the ball. Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean will be honorary vice chairman and Mrs. John Boyle, jr., will be executive chairman.

There will be a diplomatic committee, with wives of diplomats serving; a committee composed of Cabinet officers and another of wives of Senators. Other groups represented in plans for the party will be chosen from debutantes, the younger marrieds, the subdebutantes and the Army and Navy.

The fashion show will be under the direction of June Hamilton Rhodes, New York fashion expert, and jewels will be lent by jewelers of Washington. Mannequins who were featured in Watler Wanger's movie "Vogues of 1938" will model.

Tea Party Given For Mrs. Biggers

Mrs. Stuart A. Rice was hostess at a tea yesterday in honor of Mrs. John D. Biggers, whose husband is Administrator of the unemployment census. Mr. Rice as chairman of the statistical board in connection with the census, has set up the questionnaire being out to obtain information for the project.

Mrs. Rice's home, in Arlington, was decorated with autumn flowers and leaves and the tea tables glowed with white and yellow "mums" and yellow candlesticks. Adding to the "woodsy" effect, a roaring log fire blazed in the fireplace when the guests arrived to be greeted by Mrs. Rice and her guest of honor in a sunny, glass-inclosed porch adjoining the house. Both wore black velvet dresses cut on simple lines.

Those who poured the delicious Russian tea and coffee were Mrs. A. Ford Hindricks, Mrs. Walter Burr, Miss Aryness Joy and Mrs. N. M. Engle. Assisting them in serving cakes and sandwiches were Mrs. John G. Pollard, Mrs. Sidney Frissell, Mrs. Fred Robinson, Mrs. Herbert Bratter, Mrs. T. Woofter, Mrs. Virgil Reed and Mrs. F. Stephan.

Among the many guests invited were Mrs. Fred Robinson, whose husband is Mr. Biggers' assistant, Dr. Theresa McMahon, Mrs. Arthur G. Altmeyer, Mrs. W. A. Roberts, Mrs. Robert Freer, Mrs. John Brook, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Mrs. Harry Mitchell, Mrs. H. G. Moulton, Mrs. R. B. W. Connor, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan.

Later in the afternoon Mr. Biggers and Mr. Rice arrived with husbands of other guests to make the affair even larger.

Mrs. Ross to Give Tea for Irish Guest On Visit to America

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, will entertain at tea tomorrow in honor of Mrs. R. Leathem, who is in Washington for a few days and is staying at the Shoreham. With Mrs. Leatnem, whose home is near Belfast, Ireland, is her niece, Miss Alice Bond.

Mrs. Ross is a friend of Mrs. Leathem's sister-in-law, Mrs. Ernest Leathem, who lives in Memphis, Tenn.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

IF MARRIAGES AMONG members of the Diplomatic Corps keep on at their present rate, there won't be a single bachelor left by Christmas. The latest nuptial news in this connection—and it will come as a complete surprise to Washington—is that of Noel Trentham, Financial Counselor of the British Embassy, who was married yesterday at a quiet ceremony in New York to Miss Mary Dobbin, of St. Johns, Newfoundland. No previous announcement of the engagement had been made.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Before coming to Washington early last spring, Mr. Trentham served as Commissioner of Finance in Newfoundland for some time. One of the most popular members of the staff of the British Embassy here, he resided in Washington at the Shoreham.

We regret we were unable to obtain any more information about his bride, but Washington will have a chance to welcome her when Mr. and Mrs. Trentham return to the Capital, probably the latter part of next week.

MARTA ABBA, star of "Tovarich," is a charming excuse for much of the social gayety in the Capital this week. Today the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, are entertaining at a luncheon for her and for Rudolf Forster, the leading man in the play. Mr. Forster is an Austrian and took the place of John Halliday, who had this part in the Broadway production.

This afternoon Mrs. Russell Bennett is giving a very small and informal tea for Miss Abba in her apartment on Eighteenth street. She will be assisted by her daughter, Miss Florence Harris.

Yesterday the Marquis Capomazza, Secretary of the Italian Embassy, gave a cocktail party for his distinguished countrywoman.

Here we go blithely breaking our promise not to mention the Windsors again! But since we still reach avidly for anything printed concerning them, we hope your curiosity on the subject is not quite exhausted either.

Except for George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, and Mrs. Merryman—and they won't tell—nobody yet knows definitely where the Windsors will lodge themselves. But among the places they could stay was the home of Clarence Hewes at 2358 Massachusetts avenue. "Buzzy" Hewes wrote to the Duke some time ago offering him his house, although he said he didn't have room to put up the whole entourage. The Duke replied thanking him very much and saying that at that time their plans were not yet completed.

Buzzy knows both the Duke and Duchess very well and visited the latter at the Chateau of Cande several weeks before her marriage. His beautiful home here, near Sheridan circle, is filled with lovely things Buzzy picked up when he was in the Orient with our foreign service, and has a terrace overlooking Rock Creek Park.

BRUCE CABOT (of the Hollywood, not the Boston Cabots), was a guest in Mrs. John Hay Whitney's box at the opening of the National Horse Show in New York the other night. For once, Mrs. Whitney abandoned her riding clothes and wore a scarlet gown made on simple lines. Mrs. James Hamilton, of Warrenton, and Miss Dolores Barreto, of Washington, were also in her box.

The opening was very gala-gala, according to reports. All the rotogravure faces from New York society were present, and many Washington well-knowns to boot. Among the latter was Gen. Leon B. Kromer, of Fort Myer, who is judging the show. Seated with him in the judges' box was his son, Leon, jr. Col. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commandant at Fort Myer, was accompanied to the opening by Mrs. Wainwright. He, too, is serving as a judge.

Already returned to Washington are the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, who went up for the opening at Madison Square Garden.

Miss Ayres is the daughter of W. A. Ayres, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and Miss Miller is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Justine Miller.

Capital Society Leaders Attend Chrysanthemum Show Preview

Mrs. Henry Wallace Hostess as Display Opens in Government Greenhouses; Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Morgenthau Present.

Flowers that bloom in the fall brought society out before noon yesterday. In fact the sun was still climbing up the east side of the old Postoffice Tower when Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, made one of her few social appearances of the season as hostess at the preview of the Annual Chrysanthemum Show, at the Government Greenhouses at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue.

Wearing a chic tweed suit of mingled blue and maize and a soft dark blue felt hat, she remarked, laughing, that she was thinking of "serving doughnuts and coffee," just to take the chill off the glass enclosed conservatory which must be kept at November temperature for the sake of the floral display.

A placard overhead directed the guests to "keep to the right" as they filed down the cement-floored aisles between the yellow, white, bronze and lavender galaxy of 'mums, tagged, each one, with its own special name—some in honor of certain States, some in honor of important personages and some christened with such fascinating excursions into the language of flowers as "Firebird" and "Crystal Dome." Tallest of all was named "Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone were there. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, also attended, looking very stunning in a seal cape and close-fitting black velvet turban. Arriving at almost the same time were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. William E. Boran. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, appeared a little later.

Frau Dieckhoff Attends Show

Among the diplomatic group who previewed the show was Frau Dieckhoff, wife of the German Ambasasdor, her lovely complexion beautifully set off by a svelte black suit heavily banded with Persian lamb. Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, arrived about 11 o'clock, wearing brown seal and a smart black hat topped off with a little feather. Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, was seen chatting with Frau Dieckhoff about the flowers, and wearing a very natty blue tweed suit with long coat, underneath of which was a bright red sweater with a high neck.

Little Didi Rajamaitri, whose appearance anywhere is almost sure to stop the "show" proved up to her form yesterday by practically stopping this one. Eagerly sniffing the tawny blossoms to discover if they smelt "as nice as they looked," she wore a hunter's green coat and bonnet and was accompanied by her mother, the wife of the Minister of Siam who had donned a brown tailored suit for the occasion. Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, was also in tailored brown.

Mme. Kobayashi, wife of the Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy, looking tall and striking in black, came in place of Mme. Saito, who was unable to attend.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, in black, was there shortly after the doors opened and left early. Another 10 o'clock scholar was Mrs. Edwin Meredith, wife of the former Secretary of Agriculture under the Wilson Administration.

Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, who made an enthusiastic tour of the chrysanthemums, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, remarked wittily to Mrs. Wallace that, of course, they couldn't stay away when there were so many "blooms" at the show.

Social Circles Well Represented

Mrs. Donald Richberg in green with brown fur and a chic green hat also put in an appearance, as did Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, who wore brown tweed with an overplaid effect and a brown hat. Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who had stopped off for the 'mum show between one concert and the next, was very stately in a black suit and long, heavy silver fox furs.

British Envoy Host at Dinner

Belgian Ambassador and Wife Ranking Guests at Embassy Affair.

The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay entertained at a dinner last evening at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue.

Others present were the Ambassador of Poland, Count Jerzy Potocki; Lady Kennard, who has been visiting Mrs. Clarence Wilson, who was also present; M. S. Two Writers In Talks for Pen Women

Mmes. Dunlap and Martin Take Part in Book Review Luncheon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Two authors, Mrs. Katherine Dunlap and Mrs. Mabel Wood Martin, and the editor of the book page of The Washington Post, Miss Bett Hooper, were speakers yesterday at the first of a series of book-review luncheons sponsored by the District branch of the League of American Pen Women in its studio at the Grafton Hotel. The national president of the league, Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, who is in Washington for a few days, also was a guest of honor and spoke briefly.

The luncheon marked the revival of a custom inaugurated when the District branch was first organized, with Mrs. Theodore Tiller as its president. Mrs. Tiller was responsible at that time for starting the book review meetings and is chairman of the present series. She expects to continue the plan of former years of inviting authors of recent books to tell how they happened to write their stories.

Miss Hooper was the first speaker presented to the luncheon guests and discussed present-day books, their variety and character. Masterpieces are few, she observed, despite the vast volume of literary material which is now being produced. She mentioned the many authors who found an outlet in writing during long illnesses.

Mrs. Dunlap, whose most recent book is "Lady, Be Good," explained that she had justified Robert Louis Stevenson's two reasons for writing—the love of a place and the love of a character. Her first book, "Encore," was an endeavor to express her devotion to her chateau in France and the country which is its setting, she said. "Lady, Be Good" is a character sketch, and is not autobiographical, she added.

"I am tired of having people decide every book is an autobiography," she declared, and assured her audience hers had no connection with her own experience.

Mrs. Martin told the pen women her book, "The Lingering Fawn," was the result of an urge to voice a protest against war and its consequences. She wrote it after observing the suffering of the wounded in France following the World War, she said.

Mrs. Hoyt complimented the District branch on its revival of the book review luncheons and said she expected to recommend to other branches the plan of having similar affairs.

The studio of the District branch, in which the luncheon was held, is the scene of its weekly teas and other meetings. The walls are hung with pictures which are the work of its artist members; its bookshelves contain volumes by its author members, and its composer members, of which the national president is one, are represented by musical works in its collection. The studio is soon to have new draperies of eggshell damask, replacing the president ones of mulberry shade.

The monthly broadcast of the branch will be given tomorrow over WJSV, on the Civic Forum program at 9:45 a. m. The fiction chairman, Helen Orr Watson, the wife of Maj. James T. Watson, will interview the former fiction chairman, Phyllis Moore Gallagher, on "Washington as an Inspiration for Short Stories." Mrs. Watson's new book, "Chance," the story of a U. S. Army homing pigeon, is being published by Harper. Mrs. Gallagher, the wife of Bernard John Gallagher, a Washington attorney, is the author of more than 1,500 short stories and has just completed her third novel.

Among the guests at the luncheon yesterday were Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the District branch; Mrs. Emma Triepel, one of the founders of the national league; Mrs. Margaret T. Preston, Mrs. Augustus O. Thomas, Miss Flora Casey, Mrs. Catherine Scott, Mrs. Myrtle Richardson, Mrs. Robert J. Bates, Mrs. James Irvin Steel, Mrs. William Walter Badgley, a past president; Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, first vice president; Mrs. Anne Wagenhurst Manchester, Mrs. Theodore J. Morgan, Mrs. John E. Fowler, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, Mrs. D. A. MacDougall, Miss Maud MacDougall and Mrs. Minnie Frost Rands.

Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer will sing, and guests of honor will include Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, of which the auxiliary is a member; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, past president; Chief Engineer Charles Schrom, of the Fire Department, and Mrs. Schrom; Fire Marshal Calvin C. Lauber, and Mrs. Lauber; Executive Chief Engineer Edward Pierce and Mrs. Pierce, and Mrs. Mattie Gibson, superintendent of Children's Hospital. She "has gone through all the chairs" and will show medals and ribbons she has received in appreciation of her service to the order.

Most of the members of Mayflower Council have belonged to the organization many years, but its two youngest members are now its chief officers. They are Miss Esther Miller, councilor, and Miss Margaret Myerly, vice councilor.

THE GIRLS FRIENDLY SOCIETY is resuming its work for the season with a variety of activities. Epiphany Branch has just sponsored a turkey supper and bazaar in the parish house, to raise funds for its missionary and social work. The younger members are in charge of Miss Jean Campbell.

D. C. Film Society Lists Showings in Winter Season

A Town Hall of the Motion Picture is announced by the Washington Film Society in a program just issued, listing films which will be shown for its members during the winter. In co-operation with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, pictures will be presented under such headings as "Tracing the Rise of the American Film," the "Western Film," "Contemporary Films" and "Early American Comedies."

The society was formed last year, inspired by the success of similar ones in other capitals of the world, as a nonprofit organization, designed to bring to its membership motion pictures not usually seen. These include old films of America and Europe, new foreign releases, scientific films and those of exceptional artistic or cultural merit. The showings will be on nine Wednesday evenings and one Thursday at the Rialto Theater.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien is chairman of the society, Matilda Young, secretary, and Admiral Mark L. Bristol, treasurer, and it is sponsored by a distinguished list of Washingtonians.

D. A. R. to Mark Regent's Grave

Brig. Gen. Rezin Beall Chapter, D. A. R., of Laurel, Md., will honor a former regent on Sunday at 3 p. m., when the members, assisted by the Maryland State vice regent, Mrs. Maud H. Maulsby; the State chaplain, Mrs. Anthony Bonn, and other State officers, will dedicate a D. A. R. marker on the grave of Miss Laura Kerr Matthews, at Holy Trinity Church, on the Defense highway, at Collingwood, Md.

Miss Matthews, a resident of Laurel at the time of her death in February, 1936, was registrar, regent and honorary regent of the chapter. A teacher in the public schools of Prince Georges County for over 40 years, Miss Matthews was intensely interested in assisting young people desiring an education. She gave the first $100 to the D. A. R. student loan of Maryland, and left a generous additional bequest to the fund in her will. She also presented many old relics and documents to the D. A. R. library and museum in Continental Hall, Washington, many of these relics having been in the family of the late Dr. William Duvall, of Gladswood, near Laurel, who was Miss Matthews' uncle. Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave, of Laurel, is in charge of the dedication of the marker.

Women Told Of Advances In Colombia

Senora de Aya Asserts Hour Has Struck to Take Leadership.

This is the moment for women of Colombia to take more responsible leadership, in the opinion of Senora de Aya, ardent feminist, who spent yesterday in Washington as the guest of Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women. For the past six or eight years, there has been an awakening in her country, she says which has surpassed anything in its history.

"In my country we are at the moment in our development when it is necessary that women help the men," declared Senora de Aya. "We are not getting on very well without their talents. The work being done on the continent by the Inter-American Commission of Women is of fundamental importance and I feel that Columbia will profit by it."

Senora de Aya's father was Gen. Currea, a leader in the Liberal Party before it came into power there with the regime of the late President Enrique Herrera, a former minister to Washington and one of the founders of the Inter-American Commission of Women at the Havana Conference in 1928.

She has followed in her father's steps as a leader in her country in social, educational, hygienic and charitable work. As a young woman, she took her graduate diploma in nursing in New York. As a child she studied in England and France and, following her marriage, lived in Paris for eight years before returning to Colombia. She has four daughters, three of whom are married to public leaders there.

Senora de Aya is proprietor of the only iron factory in Colombia, a property she inherited from her father. In addition she manages the tenants on her estates, all devoted to agriculture. Her husband's properties are coffee and sugar plantations and cattle ranches.

"I have never found it difficult to believe in equal rights for women," she said, "because on many occasions I have had to do what is traditionally called man's work as well as what is traditionally called woman's work. I have had to do for my tenants everything from dressing their wounds to advising them how to vote. As women are not allowed to vote in my country, I have often advised the men how to vote."

Senora de Aya has also been responsible for starting nursery schools; for the awakened desire for education there "is like a fever," she said. To her surprise and satisfaction she found young women of education and means eager to help the project, giving their time as do Junior League members here, teaching and caring for the young children.

Harvest Dance Planned By Comptometer Club

The Comptometer Club tomorrow night will give a Harvest Hop at the Potomac Boat Club for members and their friends. Miss Vera Latona is chairman of the party, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Pichette, Mrs. Jessie C. Ralph and Miss Verna McGonigal.

The club members, who met for tennis, bicycling, swimming and horseback riding during the summer are now resuming their bowling, and organizing other activities for the winter months.

In Concert Tonight

EDNA CRAGUN WHEELWRIGHT,

soprano, who will present a concert tonight in the recreation hall of the Latter Day Saints' Chapel under the auspices of the Washington Chapter, Daughters of Utah Pioneers. She will be assisted by Howard Severe, baritone, and D. Sterling Wheelwright and Frances O'Neill, accompanists.

Active Season Faces 19 Clubs

The Prince George County Federation is in the forefront of civic, educational and humanitarian endeavor, and its 19 clubs have before them a winter season of activity. As always, the local community club responds to calls for assistance from the school, the Red Cross, needy families, health clinics and all branches of public service.

Mrs. Elmer P. Mayberry, president, has spent a busy period since the opening of the fall meetings in all sections of the county. She recently attended a luncheon meeting called by Gov. Nice to plan a safety program; was a guest with other county and State women at the University of Maryland, to hear an address given under the auspices of the A. A. U. W.; she addressed the woman's Club of Cheverly on the occasion of its birthday, and attended a campaign meeting in Baltimore, called for the purpose of discussing the candidacy of Mrs. John L. Whitehurst for the first vice presidency of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. W. L. Corbin And Mrs. Wright Entertain Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president of the Young Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. Rred E. Wright, first vice president, yesterday afternoon entertained for the board, committee and staff members, as well as representatives from chapters and councils, at the home of Mrs. Wright, on Wyoming avenue.

The house was beautifully decorated with fall flowers, and the guests were received by Mrs. Corbin, Mrs. Wright and Miss Hettie Anderson, general secretary of the local organization.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president of the advisory board of trustees; Mrs. A. Chambers Oliphant; Miss Margaret Fox, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Miss Emma Hays Heck, Mrs. Herbert Day and Mrs. Albert Atwood, all members of the board of directors.

Miss Helen Middleton of the Girl Reserve department assisted the hostesses as did Miss Adelaida Aceves of the Mexico City Y. W. C. A., Miss Mabel Charest and some of the younger members of the staff: Mrs. Ethel Wills and Misses Marjorie Allen, Mary Putnam, Edythe Thomson, Patsy Murphy, Louise Danforth, Mildred Chapin, Gertrude Cowsill, Margaret Graves and Catherine Jones assisted.

To Whom It May Concern:

That famous Notre Dame backfield of Savoldi, Schwartz, Carideo and Brill averaged 26 years 9 months of age, if the truth be known . . . the boys were something more than green hands when they made the Notre Dame varsity . . . but Notre Dame actually was guilty of less subsidizing than a dozen other big league colleges . . . because Knute Rockne's reputation as a coach was such that he attracted dozens of high and prep school captains who were infatuated with the idea of playing for Rockne and turned down flattering offers elsewhere . . . when a man bites a dog, it's not necessarily news . . . it may be the concession stand at Griffith Stadium between the halves.

The Washington Club in 1906 refused to sign a young fellow named Walter Perry Johnson, who was then pitching around Weiser, Idaho . . . Charles E. McCoy, of 4410 Sixteenth street northwest, an employe of the Interstate Commerce Commission, brought back from the West tales about the wonder pitcher who was striking out 20 men per game for Weiser . . . Benjamin S. Minor, then president of the Washington Club, was unimpressed, declared that "these wonder pitchers" never pan out . . . undaunted, McCoy wore a path to Minor's door, pleaded for a year that the Washington Club sign Johnson . . . not until July, 1907, when McCoy declared he was making his last visit and would then tip off Col. John I. Taylor, owner of the Boston Braves, to Johnson's talents, did Minor break down and take the long chance of sending a scout to watch Johnson pitch . . . Scout Cliff Blankenship signed Johnson the same day he arrived in Weiser.

Francis T. Two seemingly certain selections for the National League's All-League team of 1937: Tackle Turk Edwards and Quarterback Sammy Baugh, of the Redskins . . . the pros' All-League team is anything but a phoney, in striking contrast to the colleges' All-American which, at best, is a guess . . . the All-League team is chosen by a ballot of the twelve coaches, who ought to know . . . their selections carry a note of authority. Last year's All-League team: Hutson (Packers) and Hewitt (Bears) at ends; Edwards (Redskins) and Smith (Packers) at tackles; Evans (Packers) and Emerson (Lions) at guards; Hein (Giants), center; Battles (Redskins), Leemans (Giants), Clarke (Lions) and Hinkle (Packers) in backfield . . . 6 of the 11 were collegiate All-Americans. Eight are married.

When Petey Sarron lost his world featherweight title to Henry Armstrong last week at the Garden, it marked his final appearance in the featherweight class . . . Sarron will campaign henceforth as a lightweight due to his inability to make 126 pounds without weakening himself . . . he has already been signed for another fight in the Garden against an unnamed opponent on November 29 . . . New York fans are clamoring to see more of the little Syrian despite his losing battle with Armstrong . . . a lightweight title fight with Lou Ambers is now the goal of Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager.

Tony Lazzeri, whose contract with the Chicago Cubs calls for a $15,000 stipend, is now the highest paid baseball coach in big league history . . . the honor formerly belonged to Art Fletcher, of the Yankees, who draws $10,000 . . . Fletcher turned down a $15,000 job as manager of the Yankees after the death of the late Miller Huggins, preferring the security of a coach's job . . . Al Schacht was always the second highest paid coach . . . he drew $7,500 when he joined up with the Red Sox after leaving Washington.

The two ornamental cannon on the east portico of the State, War and Navy Building are sighted directly toward the executive office of the White House . . . a curious Army man discovered the fact the other day . . . the cannon, made of bronze, were cast in 1798, according to the markings . . . they were captured during the Spanish-American War, which reveals what kind of armaments the Spaniards were using in 1898, and no wonder they were licked by the Americans.

Coach Alexander, of Georgia Tech, relates that a substitute quarterback once called for "play No. 25" and gained 40 yards with it, despite the fact that there was no such play in the team's repertoire . . . the other players were afraid to question the quarterback for fear they had muffed something . . . Coach Alexander has been since trying to recall without success just exactly what formation "play No. 25" called for and how it gained ground . . . he only remembers that it did . . . scientific research has exploded these popular fallacies: red-headed people are no more hot-tempered than brunettes; constant shaving does not increase the growth of beards; night-time sleep is no more beneficial than daytime sleep, and Benjamin Franklin did not discover electricity by rubbing a cat's back the wrong way.

Mississippi, Colonial Foe At Stadium

Ray Hapes, Bruiser Kinard to Lead Invaders Tonight.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Still hot on the scent of their first major victory of the campaign, George Washington's improved gridmen square off with Mississippi's migratory eleven tonight at Griffith Stadium. The kick-off is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

Since sticking their tootsies into intersectional competition the Colonials' record resembles a page of bookkeeping from the depression era. Jim Pixlee's pupils have been to the larder twice now, and found it quite bare on both occasions. In justice to them, however, it must be noted that a left-handed break kept them from taking a well-deserved decision last Friday night.

But, if reports seeping out of Mississippi are correct, the District eleven will have its colletcive hands full tonight, for, although it was tied by Temple, licked by L. S. U. and Tulane, "Ole Miss" still bears the impressive label, "Dangerous, Handle With Care." The tag applies particularly to Ray Hapes, wasp-waisted halfback, who is rated All-American timber.

Hapes Here Last Year.

Hapes was here with the team last year, but unable to show at his best because of a thick crust of mud covering the field. Two years ago, however, he gave Catholic University's potent eleven a bad case of jitters in the postseason Orange Bowl game, getting away once for a 57-yard touchdown run. The Cards remember him well.

George Washington also must stop Capt. Frank (Bruiser) Kinard, acclaimed as one of the greatest tackles ever developed in the Southland. Kinard's ability seems to have expanded in proportion to the stories told about him, for he has been outstanding in every game thus far.

But George Washington will be an even-money wager in this game, on a basis of its improved performance against Tulsa last week. Sampson again will direct the team from his halfback position, with Bob Nowasky as his running mate, Merka at quarter, and Turner, fullback.

Tim Stapleton seems to have wrested the center position away from Hallberg, in the line. Pete Yurwitz and Lloyd Berry are fixtures at end and will flank a line rounded out by Jones and Rebholz, tackle; Renzaglia and Schiering, guard. Rebholz played a beautiful game against Tulsa, but in being cast opposite Kinard has his task cut out for him tonight.

Colonials May Win.

The Colonials suddenly found a long-lost scoring punch against Tulsa, reaping two touchdowns from a judicious mixture of deception and straight football, and if they function as smoothly again the Rebels will be repulsed. In Kaufman and Sampson they have two dangerous threats who can alter the complexion of a game by a single run. Kaufman, in particular, seems ready for the kickoff, after a week of strenuous drilling.

Mississippi needs a dry field to strut its stuff properly, and the weatherman has promised full cooperation. Hapes is not the only man G. W. must watch, for Mississippi has more manpower and is much better than its record indicates. The Rebels are big and allegedly fast. They have a smart coach at the helm in Ed Walker, and he has the boys on edge for this game.

Tuskegee College Lassie to Boot 'Em

Tuskegee, Ala., Nov. 4 (AP).—A girl may kick the points after touchdowns, if any, for Tuskegee Institute in its Thanksgiving football game with Alabama State, a Negro classic.

Coach Cleve L. Abbott designated Mabel Smith, a tall, slender junior from Atlanta, to do the goal-post footwork.

American Grads Want Appearance Of Kicking Koed

Some old grads of American University took a hand in the Kicking Koed idea of Gus Welch, football coach, last night when Burke Edwards, '32, began rounding up classmates for the Saturday game with Randolph-Macon at Central Stadium.

"They are going to stage a demonstration at the game," said Edwards last night, "and demand that the coeds be allowed to kick goals when American U. makes a touchdown."

"We want some action for the old school and we give three cheers for Gus Welch and more power to him. I am busy now rounding up some of my classmates to attend the game and join me in a parade with a banner before the game starts. That banner will be as much a victory as the identity of the coed. Novelty is what the public wants," said Mr. Edwards, "who is now assistant editor of Nature Magazine.

"If girls can play basketball and golf, why not let one of them take a shot at the goal posts?" he asked.

Edwards said he expected to have 20 classmates rounded up by gametime to join in the picketing demonstration on behalf of the coeds.

Public Links Players Card Turkey Event

The annual Rock Creek Turkey Tournament, first big event of the year for the uptown public links players, will start with a qualifying round on Sunday and will wind up with the finals in all flights on the 22d, Harry Graham, manager of the northwest layout, announced yesterday.

The entry list has already exceeded 75 and includes two members of the Harding Cup team, Andy Oliveri and Bobby Bowers, in addition to Nick Altrock, Harry and George Graham, Keith Williams and others.

Qualifying will conclude on Tuesday with the first round of match play scheduled November 10 to 13, the second 14 to 17, and the semi-finals 18 to 21.

A special women's flight has drawn a pair of Indian Spring stars, Marion Brown and Mrs. Walter Stokes, in addition to Mrs. Hope Wilkinson, the municipal women's champion, and Betty Garber, former titleholder.

A 72-hole medal play southpaw event is carded over the Rock Creek course, starting November 15, with 18-hole rounds to be played on successive days. Special prizes will be awarded for low 9 and 18 hole rounds. A women's flight will be provided if more than 10 enter.

Redskins Lose Two Through Tonsillitis, Flu

Jim Karcher and Bob McChesney, guard and end, respectively, were lost to the Redskins yesterday for indefinite periods when they were placed under the care of the club physician, Dr. Edward Larkins.

Karcher, a former Ohio State athlete who is serving his second season with the local pro team, was removed to Georgetown Hospital suffering from an acute attack of tonsillitis, while McChesney, who played at U. C. L. A. and also serving his second year as a pro, was ordered to bed with a mild attack of the flu.

Larkin expressed the belief that Karcher could be treated so as to avoid an immediate operation and to permit his playing the rest of the season. McChesney, running a high temperature, will also be moved to Georgetown, should he fail to respond rapidly to treatment, Larkin said.

Champion of Bare-Knuckle Days Is Dead

Jack McAuliffe Succumbs to Throat Ailment in 72nd Year.

By Harry Ferguson,
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Nov. 4.—Jack McAuliffe, who never was defeated after he became lightweight champion of the world in the days of bare-knuckle bouts, lost today to the foe no man can conquer—death.

He was 72, and had been ill nearly three years of a throat ailment, and was in a coma for the last 48 hours of his life.

McAuliffe retired from the ring in 1892, but four years later he came back to fight a six-round no-decision bout with Kid Lavigne. Then he left the ring for good and behind him was a record unblemished by defeat—13 knockouts, 32 decision victories, 9 draws, 3 no-decision bouts and 1 exhibition.

JACK McAULIFFE.

McAuliffe died at his Forest Hills home. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Genevive McAuliffe, and a nephew, John E. McAuliffe. Burial will be in Albany, N. Y.

Critics said he was one of the greatest fighters of his weight who ever lived, and boxing in those days

Cowboy Is Released From Monday Card

Heated Controversy Between Managers Leonard and Menendez Results in Irish Johnny Dean's Meeting Dunne in Feature.

Cowboy Howard Scott, the District lightweight boxing champion, yesterday was released from his contract to fight Irish Eddie Dunne, Benny Leonard's protege, next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Scott and Dunne were booked to scrap in the feature match, but a heated controversy over the number of rounds, assuming the proportions of a fistic war, broke out late in the afternoon and forced Goldie Ahearn, pudgy matchmaker for the Turner-Ahearn fistic firm, to call on a substitute.

When the firing had ceased, Scott was completely erased from the Monday picture, and Irish Johnny Dean, the popular jumping jack handled by Henry (The Duke) Abrams, had been signed to meet Leonard's fighter.

The main figures in this feud were Leonard, the former lightweight champion; Gabe Menendez, the little Spanish don who manages Scott, and Matchmaker Ahearn.

Leonard, Menendez Row.

When Leonard had Dunne sign for the Scott match Bennah agreed to eight rounds, it was said. When Menendez had Scott sign he said to the matchmaker, "I will leave the number of rounds to your better judgment." Well, that was the straw that broke the camel's back, as they say.

Menendez figured Ahearn would make it ten rounds. Wednesday Menendez said eight rounds was O. K. with him, but yesterday his fighter squawked, and the Spanish boy stormed into Ahearn's store demanding ten rounds.

"Either the fight goes ten rounds, or my man pulls out," Gabe informed Ahearn.

Said Bennah:

"My fighter is young, and I don't want him to go ten against Scott, who is a more seasoned fighter. If Scott is afraid to meet him in eight—he oughta be ashamed of himself. If he can beat him in ten, he certainly can beat him in eight. Eight rounds or my fighter pulls out!"

Ahearn Tries to Reason.

Then followed a heated talk between Menendez and Leonard. After which Ahearn tried to reason with Menendez, but there was no soap.

"I have given Scott plenty of breaks on fight cards," Ahearn said. "Didn't I book him against Ambers? That's appreciation for you. But just to be a nice fellow—I'll release your man from the contract."

Indications are that the verbal fracas between Scott's manager and Ahearn might endanger Scott's chances of fighting on cards at the Arena for the remainder of the season.

Meanwhile Ahearn figured he had a better match in Johnny Dean and Dunne. Dean's weaving, bobbing style, his counter punching, would make a perfect match for Dunne's rapid-fire punching.

It will be a battle between two Irishmen, both born in auld Erin.

Gas Lights and Brass Knuckles.

The Life of Jack McAuliffe, undefeated lightweight champion of the world in the bare-knuckle days, written by Harry Ferguson, will start in The Post Monday.

Ferguson was long a close friend of the champion and is writing a series of intimate dispatches on McAuliff's career.

First story starts Monday in The Washington Post.

Challephen Wins Going Away in Heiser Handicap at Pimlico Track

Lady's Beau Runs Second In Feature

Homesteader Captures Day's Steeplechase at Hilltop.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Race Track, Nov. 4.—Challephen, a $2.70 favorite, ran in accord with the wagering of the majority of 10,000 turf fans and won the $2,500 added Heiser Handicap, featuring today's program at the Hilltop. Owned by W. L. Brann, who bought out his partner in the stable long known as the Brann-castle Farm, Challephen was given a rated ride most of the way and had no trouble emerging two lengths in front of Lady's Beau. Unheralded was third in the field of five contesting at a mile and 70 yards.

Jockey Joe Wagner rode a confident race, easing the Challenger II gelding during the early running, while Lady's Beau and Dunnamany burned the pace-setting oil. However, leaving the backstretch, Wagner asked for speed and his mount responded, going to the front gradually, to win going away. There was a lot of hustling, scuffling and crowding behind the favorite, in which Lady's Beau managed to cling to second honors. Dunnamany, if the long shot had a chance, was crowded into the rail and Jockey F. A. Smith pulled up to keep from going over the infield fence.

Racing conditions were never better and Challephan stepped around the fast track in 1:45 1-5.

Spartan Lady, racing for W. N. Adrians, won the first race in rather easy fashion, coming through on the inside entering the stretch to get to the front and drawing out to win by four lengths. Inactive, a long shot and prominent from the start, was second, and Sun Apollo, the favorite, was third. Spartan Lady paid $8.10.

Col. E. R. Bradley's Baby League made a show of her field in the second race, a sprint for juvenile fillies. The little daughter of Bubbling Over took command at the break and was never seriously threatened, winning by five lengths over Heraldic, with Gulf Breeze third in the group of a dozen. Baby League was a favorite at a $4.30 mutuel and completed a $27.20 daily double.

Check Signal, owned by Mrs. L. H. Silver and trained by her husband, was the winner of the thrilling three-way photo finish in the third race. The $17 shot was credited with a head victory over Pine Frills and Affirmation. Check Signal was powerfully ridden by Jockey Joe Lynch and overcame much trouble to come through with a fine stretch drive.

Homesteader Scores.

Homesteader, owned by Mrs. Randolph Scott's Montpelier Farm, won the Masters of Fox Hounds Steeplechase, annual competition for hunters and amateur riders. Homesteader went over the 19 fences and finished six lengths ahead of Little Cottage II, ridden by J. S. Harrison. Beaten a neck for second money was Glory Road, with P. D. Reid in the saddle. Willie Jones, son of Trainer "Doc" Jones, was the hero of the race for he won despite the fact that Homesteader's saddle slipped badly and he was risking his very neck at every fence. S. Watters, jr., was the victim of poor racing luck. Bellman, his mount, was in front but met with interference from the loose Kingsem which lost Rider R. J. Duffey spectacularly after the second fence. Those who wagered on Homesteader collected a $7 mutuel. It was the tenth running of the 3-mile test and the time of 6:28 1-5 next to the highest for the race.

Steele, Lopez Scrap Is Draw

In a combined wrestling match-strip tease performance, Vincent Lopez (not the orchestra leader), Ray Steele, California Adonis, and Cyclone Burns, referee, endured six rounds of fierce fireworks last night in the feature match of the weekly wrestling card at Turner's Arena and then decided that things stood all even.

Lopez, burly Mexican, and Steele, former champion, were getting along O. K. from the wrestling standpoint through the first four rounds of the 10-minute rounds, with Steele winning the first two, and losing the third, the fourth being even, when the burlesque act started.

Steele, enraged, proceeded to pull off the front of Burns' pants, displaying the third man in a pair of purple tights. And during the fifth round, he completed the job, completely disrobing Cyclone, who refused to give ground and stuck to his guns, finishing the Australian match in his violet trunks.

In the semiwindup, Cliff Olson, Minnesota Swede, threw Bill Sledge, Rice Institute athlete, in 23 minutes with an arm stretch and body slam.

Preliminary matches went to Hans Steinke, who defeated Scotty McDougal, with an Australian boomerang in 12 minutes, and Mays McLain, who threw Henry Reiss in 11 minutes with a body press, while Jack Hader and Abe Kashey waltzed to a draw.

Georgia Tech, with a rating of 87.5, last Saturday took the predicted measure of Vanderbilt, rated 74.4, by 14 points. The Rambling Wrecks served notice on the Californians from the Pacific Coast League that the Christmas Day game would be anything but a picnic. Should Georgia Tech entrain for the Coast in sufficient time to recover from the long trip, Santa Claus should have California in the bag for Georgia Tech.

Alabama, Dixie's only majof unbeaten team, punished Kentucky by a sufficiently large score to regain the number one position in national ranking, having replaced Pitt by a bare .4 of a point. Each of these teams is much too strong for Pacific Coast competition and would administer a sound licking to highly touted Western adversaries.

Alabama's clash with Tulane next week at New Orleans will pit two of the South's strongest combines in a battle royal.

Pitt Favored Over Irish.

Pittsburgh, meeting the mighty Irish, may repeat the 26-0 drubbing administered Notre Dame last season, barring Pitt overconfidence. Notre Dame has advanced rapidly in power to punish both the Navy and Minnesota. To keep up this pace would place the Irish in the super-human class. This appears unlikely.

The Difference-By-Score national ratings are manpower standings of football teams based upon performance to date this season. Should any two teams play, the outcome of the game would be the difference between the two ratings provided each team played the brand of football averaged in their previous games this season. As an example, were Alabama, rated 100.3, to play Fordham, rated 99.8, the outcome of the game probably would result in the same scoreless tie of the Pittsburgh game as there is but a half point difference between the two teams.

1,105 Winners.

In 1,279 games played this season, the Difference-By-Score system has produced 1,105 winners for an 86.39 per cent efficiency. The all-time accuracy for the past six years has picked 18,559 games out of 21,243 for an average of 87.37 per cent.

Louis-Schmeling Bout Site Is Undecided

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—In the absence of Promoter Mike Jacobs, Vice President Bill Farnsworth, of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, said today no site had yet been selected for the heavyweight championship bout next June between Titleholder Joe Louis and Max Schmeling.

"He has contracts for two years at the Madison Square Garden Bowl and the two local ball parks, but he'll take the fight to whichever city makes him the most attractive offer."

Sports Postscripts . . . . . By Bob Garrison

Funny how things work out . . . MARY LOUISE BROWN, dean of women at American University, objected to Football Coach GUS WELCH'S idea of employing a coed kicker for his football team, and then was informed that her alma mater, DEPAUW University, in Indiana, is planning to do exactly what she refused to allow—use a girl to kick points after touchdown . . . TOMMY WHALEN, Catholic University's honorably mentioned all-America back of a few years ago, has reserved the first copy of JOE HOLMAN'S illustrated book of poems, "FRECKLE FACE," soon off the press.

One of the best minor league players in baseball is GEORGE McQUINN, of the champion Newark Bears, who resides right next door in Balston, Va. . . . although he didn't stick with the Cincinnati Reds last season, he gets a real opportunity this year when he goes South with the St. Louis Browns . . . he and another local favorite, CHARLIE KELLER, the Maryland University product, were big cogs in Newark's sensational International League pennant victory.

MIKE ("DIZ") ESLIN, of Golden Gloves fame, finally gets a chance to capitalize on his natural flow of comedy, at the invitation of JIMMY LAKE, who has invited him to appear at his Gayety Theater for one week, at $60 per . . . it should work out all right, but what if "DIZ" gets enough applause for singing "Pennies from Heaven" to warrant an encore . . . then the trouble begins, because that, my friends, is the only ditty MIKE knows . . . there's always the old strip-tease . . .

JOEY KAUFMAN, who has been beat out of his job in the George Washington University backfield, can take pride in the fact that the man who supplanted him used his tactics . . . VIC SAMPSON, a Junior, whose brilliant ball carrying, passing, and speed-a-foot, has earned him JOEY'S job, is nothing short of KAUFMAN'S protege . . . KAUFMAN, who was supposed to be another TUFFY LEEMANS, this season, following his great work last year, may have slipped in the opinion of many Buff supporters, but in the eyes of SAMPSON, whom he has taught much about toting the leather, he's still a great football player, and what's even more important, "a great guy" . . .

Ambers Boxes Burns.

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Charlie Goldman, manager of Lou Ambers, world lightweight champion, announced tonight that Ambers would box Charlie Burns, of St. Louis, in a ten round, over-the-weight bout at St. Louis, Tuesday, November 16.

Rovers Meet Orioles.

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—The New York Rovers, local entrants in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, will open their 56-game schedule at Madison Square Garden on Sunday, November 14, against the Baltimore Orioles.

Hockey Ace Signs.

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Reginald (Hooley) Smith, veteran of a decade of big league hockey wars, was purchased by the New York Americans of the National League from the Boston Bruins tonight.

Is it really a Breathless Moment?

Tests show that VINTAGE TOBACCO is at least 25% easier on your breath than all other 5¢ cigars tested . . .

BE kind to your friends. Avoid offending. Enjoy the fragrance and aroma of a good cigar . . . but be sure it leaves no long-lingering odor to taint your breath.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

Once you've switched to White Owls, you'll know a new joy in smoking. Try one today.

THE METALLIC NOSE KNOWS

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Jack Dempsey Talks About Windsors.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 4.—Jack Dempsey, the Windsors and Kite:

White light beat down upon the round, green-felted poker table where the manassa mauler and five other men were playing kite. I will not bore you with a blow-by-blow on how kite is played.

Suffice to say that it is "sudden death" with pasteboards, and even in a friendly game like that played in Dempsey's little room above his tavern, you can drop a couple hundred bucks quicker than you can watch a ten-round fight.

* * * *

Jack loves cards and usually he is the hottest player at a table, but tonight he was off his stride. It was easy to see that his mind was not on the game. I was kibitzing over his big shoulders. After noting several somewhat stupid plays, I said, "What's the matter Jack? What's wrong with you tonight?"

* * * *

He frowned and replied, "I got something on my mind. I'm worried about the Duke and Duchess. I don't know what to do about them."

* * * *

"Well——," said Jack, "I never met the Duke, but he and the Duchess will arrive here on Armistice Day. I'd like to invite them to my place for lunch or dinner or something. But I don't know if it would be the right thing to do. I mean I don't know if it's proper. They might think I was forward, sticking my invitation in when they're all tied up with a lot of society affairs. I wouldn't want them to get the wrong impression of me."

* * * *

The big fellow was genuinely worried. I hadn't seen him so worried about anything since one day in August, 1915, when he was leaning against a billboard in Reno, Nev., and wondering (1) how he was going to pay his board bill and (2) how he was going to get out of town. It seems that a return match with Johnny Sudenberg, scheduled for Reno, had fallen through—leaving Jack in a financial plight.

* * * *

With difficulty I refrained from bellowing laughter into Dempsey's slightly cauliflowered right ear. It struck me so funny—the mauler's big 1937 problem—when contrasted with the difficulties that used to furrow his Indian brow in the old pork and bean days in Tonopah and Goldfield. Here he was—worrying about inviting a duke and duchess to his own big tavern—the same guy who had to borrow boxing shoes and trunks when he started training at Tonopah's big casino for his blood and thunder battle with apple-cheeked Sudenberg. The same guy who thought that the railroads had provided brakebeams, "blinds," and "gondolas" sorely for his transportation needs.

* * * *

The other kite players were not amused by Dempsey's social problem. One gray-haired fellow, Nick, growled, "pick up your cards, you're slowin' up the game." And a chubby chap, Bill, said sarcastically, "why don't you write to Emily Post?"

* * * *

After a few hands, I asked Jack, "How do you figure Schmeling will do when he fights Joe Louis again?" Schmeling is coming over on the same boat with Eddie and Wally.

* * * *

Dempsey replied, "Max'll knock him out again, if he gets those three fights under his belt first—as he is planning to do. Schmeling will get the title. And then Tommy Farr will beat Schmeling. It's funny. Farr couldn't beat Louis, but everybody who knows anything about boxing—knows that he'll take the German easy."

* * * *

Why was Jack so sure that Farr would beat Maxie?

"Because the Welshman is an old-school fighter—tough as a mule and a good boxer. He can't punch much. But he won't have to against Schmeling—who's got only one good hand. Schmeling can't hurt Tommy, and Tommy will box rings around him."

Was Dempsey still interested in handling fighters?

Notre Dame, Purdue Are Underdogs

Yale Star Also Likes Penn, Harvard and Navy

By Larry Kelley.

A week brings many changes.

Last week I thought it would be bad for a freshman reporter to try to predict football winners. But the upsets came so thick and fast that they had the "experts" dizzy, so this week I'll go "out on the limb" with the best in the game and see how the old Irish luck holds out . . . it's been pretty good to me so far.

The top game of the country, as far as public interest goes, is the finale of the Notre Dame-Pitt series. Out in South Bend, an undefeated Pitt team invades the backyard playground of the "Fighting Irish," properly named such for the first time in many a year.

With a strong forward wall and two halfbacks who can really travel, McCormick and McCarthy, the Irish have been coming with a rush after a slow start. This may well be the best team Layden has coached. We'll know the answer to that Saturday night.

The Panthers took Carnegie Tech in stride last week while resting their two most important cogs, Marshall Goldberg and Bill Daddio, while the Irish were all out to gain that all-important one-point over Minnesota.

For this reason and with trembling and trepidation, I cast one vote for Dr. Jock and his medicine too bitter to swallow.

Purdue-Fordham.

The most interesting intersectional clash brings together undefeated but once-tied Fordham and twice-beaten Purdue. When the season started, great things were expected of the Boilermakers. But Coach Noble Kizer was stricken just prior to their first game and the boys never fulfilled their early promise, going down before Ohio State and Northwestern.

Fordham, on the other hand, finally seems to be developing that long-promised offense. The Rams registered two touchdowns against strong North Carolina last Saturday and looked impressive. Their feat of holding Pittsburgh scoreless makes me think they can do the same thing to Purdue's one-man offense, Cecil Isbell.

One vote for Fordham.

The chief game of the Ivy League turns the spotlight on Cambridge where once-beaten Harvard plays host to once-beaten Army. This clash is important because it may give a line on what is to come, Army having lost to Yale and Harvard playing a tie with Navy. So the result of this one should cast light on both the coming Yale-Harvard and Army-Navy games.

At Harvard, the results so long hoped for with the advent of Dick Harlow, better known for his brilliant study while at Cambridge than for his football teams, seem to be near at hand. This year's Crimson outfit ran wild against Princeton and seems to be a match for almost any "amateur" team in the country. Although losing to a faster Dartmouth team on a muddy field, they outplayed the Indians while losing.

I think they'll beat Army.

The Dartmouth-Princeton clash brings up only one point—can Dartmouth come back mentally after having an almost sure win against Yale turned into a tie in the last 15 seconds? I think they can, and look for the Indians to roll up a fair margin over a subnormal Tiger outfit. Princeton probably has at least one good game in its system, but I hope that one will be saved for Yale—for old time's sake and for the benefit of the cash customers.

Likes Middies.

Two interesting teams come together at Annapolis, where the gentlemen of the press must request the various admirals to remove their tall plumed hats, which effectively screen the press box from the playing field.

Navy has three fine backs in Ingram, Cooke and Wood, and bouncing back from last week's poor showing against Penn, I like the Middies to win the ball game.

After a fine victory over Navy last week, Penn may very well be on the rise after a disappointing start, and seems to pack too much power for Penn State. The Quakers will be fighting for the rest of the season to save the scalp of their popular coach, Harvey Harman. Said scalp being in some danger from the Philadelphia Monday Morning Quarterbacks.

So endeth the first guessin'!

Gomez Is Chief Nat Nemesis, Records Reveal; Chase Stars

Lefty Gomez, of the Yankees, was the chief pitching nemesis of the Washington Club during 1937, official American League averages released yesterday reveal.

Six of Gomez's 20 triumphs of the season were registered at the expense of the Nats. Gomez won his six games from Washington consecutively after Buck Newsom beat him in his first start against the Nats.

Three pitchers succeeded in beating the Nats as many as four times—Ted Lyons and Vernon Kennedy of the White Sox, and Roxie Lawson, of the Tigers.

Young Kendall Chase, the Nats' rookie left hander, took rank among the few pitchers who had consistent success against the Yankees. Elden Auker, of the Tigers, faced the Yanks three times without defeat and both Chase and Monty Stratton, of the White Sox, scored a pair of victories over the New Yorkers without a loss. Thornton Lee, of the Sox, beat the Yanks the first five times he faced 'em but then lost three in a row to McCarthy's Club.

The popular belief that the Nats were weak against left-handed pitching is riddled by the figures which show that Washington won 27 games from southpaws while losing only 22.

W. Virginia Wesleyan to Drill Today

Opponents of Catholics Feature Coleman, Triple Threat.

A carload of big, rawboned mountain boys whose inability to hit a winning stride thus far this season has the experts talking to themselves, will arrive today when West Virginia Wesleyan's Bobcats pitch their tents to await tomorrow's game with Catholic University.

The Cats haven't won a game this year, despite the fact that it was supposed to be one of their best. Only 13 points are credited to them, and those were made here earlier in the season against George Washington. But "Dutch" Bergman and his boys remember last year when Wesleyan wasn't supposed to be so good and still managed to take the Cards into camp.

Individually, Wesleyan has one of the strongest outfits ever assembled at the school, with Albie Coleman, triple-threat halfback, heading the list of talent. The West Virginia school always turns out at least one good man per season, Cliff Battles being one of its products, Nelson Peterson another, and Coleman is this year's nominee. Carl Weber and Jack LaBay rank just a trifle below Coleman on the honor list.

In the line Wesleyan features George Mike, 212-pound tackle, who earned honorable mention on the All-America last year. Kenny Moore, Ash Broadwater and Bill Ciccone are other standout linemen. Coleman, LaBay and Mike, all seniors, appear headed for pro football, and have been scouted several times this season by various pro clubs.

Wesleyan sounded a warning to Catholic U. in its game with George Washington, and a repetition of that performance may mean curtains for the District boys.

McAuliffe

was not the sort of business that poured gold into a man's pockets and made him a national hero. They fought in barns and on barges anchored in rivers; they fled when the sheriff heard of the illegal business that was going on; there were no million-dollar gates and the boxers usually got nothing more than the bets they had made with each other.

In that rough-and-tumble school McAuliffe was king of the 133-pounders, and until his illness he had an active and eager interest in boxing and other sports. He usually was at the ringside of the championship bouts and was renowned as a "good picker." He was one of the few boxing authorities in the United States who believed that Tommy Farr would put up a good fight against Joe Louis. Most of the others predicted a quick knockout for Louis, but McAuliffe insisted Farr was a rugged, old-school fighter who would do much better than everybody thought. Events bore him out.

Mrs. Moody Denies She'll Become Pro

Former Net Queen Was 'Signed Up,' Say Other Netters.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 4.—Helen Wills Moody's flat denial today that she has any idea of turning professional caused no surprise among those familiar with plans, already well formulated, for the former queen of world tennis to be a star figure in a forthcoming pro tour, starting in New York.

In San Francisco Mrs. Moody said: "I have not signed a contract, I do not intend to, and I have no plans for turning professional."

Mrs. Moody has given no public inkling of her intentions throughout negotiations with the New York promotion group, headed by Francis T. Hunter, former championship doubles partner of Big Bill Tilden. These negotiations have been in progress for several months.

Although Hunter and his associates likewise have cloaked their latest tennis plans in secrecy, it is known they have Mrs. Moody's agreement to play professionally, if and when a suitable opponent is obtained.

Seek Jedrzejowska.

This has been the main factor in delaying formal announcements but it remains to be seen whether it causes a real hitch in plans. It is believed the promoters have hopes of signing Mlle. Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, the Polish champion and runner-up this year to Chile's Anita Lizana for the American singles title. Mlle. Jedrzejowska, now in Poland, has received an offer.

It is understood both Helen Hull Jacobs and Alice Marble, former American champions, turned down professional offers. Miss Jacobs, four times titleholder, waged two highly dramatic matches with Mrs. Moody. She won by default in 1933 at Forest Hills in the U. S. finals and lost to Mrs. Moody in the Wimbledon final of 1935. Miss Marble was American champion last year.

Denial Is Denied.

A definite early January date at Madison Square Garden has already been fixed for the Eastern opening of this winter's pro tennis tour, in the expectation Mrs. Moody will be the stellar attraction.

HELEN WILLS MOODY.

"We have no reason to believe Mrs. Moody has changed her mind since she gave definite assurances, some time ago, that she was ready to make a professional tour, if and when the proper opponent could be obtained," said a source connected with the New York promoters.

It was pointed out Suzanne Lenglen was making denials of her professional intentions in 1926 at the time a certified check for $50,000 was on its way to France to bind the contract she signed with C. C. Pyle. Lenglen and Mary K. Browne, former United States champion, who toured with the famous Frenchwoman, were the last feminine titleholders to turn professional.

No Annie Oakleys.

Seminole, Okla., Nov. 4 (AP).—Nineteen Seminole High School football players are striking today because they're missing passes—the Annie Oakley kind. They walked off the field yesterday, declaring they'll not return until they get two season passes each for their parents.

Hoyas Lose Hill; W. Va. Here Today

Star Lineman Injured; Mountaineers Anxious to Avenge Defeat.

The thinning rank of gray that is Georgetown University's football squad was further depleted yesterday when Jim Hill, ace lineman, was forced to the sidelines with a pulled muscle in his leg. He is not expected to be ready for tomorrow's game with West Virginia.

But Head Coach Hagerty, who is immune to further shocks of any nature, dismissed the matter lightly.

"I'm sorry to lose Jim, with a strong team like West Virginia coming up, naturally, but the way things are going I wouldn't be surprised if we have to borrow a couple of men from them to round out a team," he said.

Hagerty, meanwhile, is more than a little worried about his team's ability to convert points after touchdowns. They got a couple of touchdowns against Manhattan last week and it was the coach's first opportunity to take note of the situation. Inasmuch as West Virginia scored only 64 points against Western Maryland, Hagerty intends to take no chances on conversions, for they may mean the difference between victory and defeat. And then, maybe not.

West Virginia, under its new coach, Little Sleepy Glenn, is scheduled to arrive here today and will practice late this afternoon at the stadium. Glenn, who was bad medicine to the Hoyas, first as a player and then as a basketball coach, is determined to atone for the 28-to-0 shellacing Georgetown handed his team last autumn at Morgantown.

St. John's-Gonzaga Date.

The annual St. John's-Gonzaga game, which will decide the private school football championship of the city, has been set for Saturday, November 13, at Catholic University Stadium. The game originally was scheduled for Friday, but was moved back one day by mutual consent.

Gonzaga Set To Skirmish Georgetown

Western Meets Wilson, Anacostia to Tackle NTS Eleven.

By Jack Munhall.

The opening skirmish of the Catholic Prep League between Gonzaga and Georgetown Prep and an interhigh series battle which brings together Western and Wilson feature the scholastic football card today.

In the other games Anacostia High's surprising Indians, who have tallied over 100 points in two appearances, face a stern test in National Training School at 3:30 o'clock in Eastern Stadium, and those old traditional rivals, St. Alban's and St. Christofer's, meet on the St. Alban's Field at the same time.

Gonzaga, defending champion in the prep loop, is enjoying one of the best seasons in recent years and is expected to start defense of its title with a decisive victory over the Little Hoyas. An upset is not remote, however, because previous form often is reversed when these bitter foes oppose. Gonzaga will invade Garrett Park with this city's fastest schoolboy backfield, the main reason for the Purple's fine record. Jim Shaw, Jim Ellis, Eddie Shea and Louis Difillipi head the ball carriers who have run roughshod over Tech, Central and Loyola of Baltimore. Eastern is the only team to down the Eyestreeters, and since that game was played in ankle-deep mud, many are not satisfied that the best club won.

Georgetown Prep under able direction of Coach Eddie Hargaden has come back this year with a worthy football representative. The Little Hoyas have a great back in Capt. Ed Cummings, a fine line and unlimited fight. This latter attribute will stand them in good stead for Gonzaga has far superior manpower.

Wilson will be seeking its first interhigh triumph when it ventures into Western Stadium to play the improved Georgetowners. The newest entry into the interhigh series has made splendid progress under Coach Carl Heintel and should give Ahearn's charges quite a tussle, although Western is expected to emerge on top. Wilson will present several players on the par with the best in the series. In this group are Johnny Stevens, a stellar defensive end, Bill Leach, the fullback and Dick Mesrobian, a tackle who is often shifted to the backfield to utilize his kicking ability.

Candid Camera Is Welcomed at CocoanutGrove

Irene Bordoni and Company of 20 Will Start Run Monday.

By Chanticleer

The Cocoanut Grove, known to after-darkers as Washington's theaterestaurants, will inaugurate a weekly "Candid Camera Night" next Monday. Appropriately enough, the innovation begins with that charming star of stage and screen, Irene Bordoni, on view at the K street gathering spot.

From now on nothing will be sacred at Cocoanut Grove what with candid camera experts on the loose. As you know, they climb on the chandeliers, under the tables, over the footlights and run periscopes through transoms. Anything to get a newer and different "shot."

Irene Bordoni brings a company of 20 persons to the Grove tonight to begin her engagement. And it might be added that not many international stars of La Bordoni's rank are brought to Washington's night club floors.

Innovations are on the up and up at the Bamboo Gardens, innovations in Chinese dishes particularly. As you old Chinese cuisine specialists already know, chop suey and chow mein are really Chinese-American dishes. As Manager Hughie Liang likes to say, "Some day I'll go to China and introduce these two American delicacies to the Chinese!" Manager Liang is really introducing some genuine Chinese dishes. A new edition of the Continental Revue is being staged on the Bamboo Gardens floor this week.

Monster Octopus Seizes California Woman, Is Slain

Fort Bragg, Calif., No. 4 (AP).—A story of several terrifying minutes in the clutches of a giant octopus was told today by Mrs. H. G. Graves. The animal grabbed her while she was gathering abalones here yesterday.

Seizing Mrs. Graves' ankle, the huge creature encircled her waist with another tentacle and pinned her left arm to her side.

She was rescued by her companions, who beat the monster to death with iron bars.

The octopus was the largest ever taken here, measuring 10 feet 5 inches from tip to tip of the longest tentacles.

Cow, Calf Wreck Train; One Killed

Batesville, Miss., Nov. 4 (AP).—A cow and her calf strayed from a pasture early today and wrecked the Illinois Central's "Panama Limited."

Fireman James T. White, 40, of Memphis, was crushed to death beneath the overturned locomotive, and Engineer Charles J. Barnett, of Memphis, was injured critically.

All passengers were safe.

Wheat Drops 2½c a Bushel To New Lows

Prospect for Big Crops With Export Lag Depresses Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 4 (AP).—Persistent smashing of season low price records tumbled wheat down more than 2½ cents here today to about 42 cents under the season's peak.

Official suggestions of likelihood that more than a billion-bushel domestic wheat crop is in prospect for 1938 did much to plunge values lower. Besides, scantiness of export demand for wheat from North America was unabated today, and recurrent weakness of securities served also as an adverse factor.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛ to 2⅜ cents under yesterday's finish, December 89⅝@89¼, May 90⅛@90¼, July 85½@85⅝, corn ⅛ to 1 cent down, December 57½@57⅝, May 59⅛@59¼, July 59¾@59⅞, oats ⅛ to ⅜ off, December 30¼, and rye at ¼ to 1 cent decline, December 70⅜. Provisions closed at 10 to 27 cents advance.

Loan Funds Dip $20,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Excess reserves for the supply of lendable money in member banks of the Federal Reserve System dropped $20,000,000 to $1,050,000,000 in the week ended November 3, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

The change was accompanied by a decrease of $62,000,000 in member bank reserve balances to $6,889,000,000, which the board attributed to a seasonable rise in the amounts of money in circulation and a boost in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Reserve Bank credit also dropped $11,000,000.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks showed no change in their $2,526,000,000 holdings of Government securities, which have remained unchanged for several weeks.

Effects of stock-market declines were shown in another drop in loans to brokers, which decreased $47,000,000 to $732,000,000 during the week.

Month's Stock Drop Totals 4 Billion Net

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—A net loss of more than $4,000,000,000 last month in the market value of its listed shares was reported today by the New York Stock Exchange.

The exchange reported 1,255 stock issues on November 1 had total market value of $44,833,215,320. This compared with $49,034,032,639 on October 1. On November 1 a year ago 1,196 stocks had a market value of $58,507,236,527. From the recovery peak last March the decline amounted to nearly $18,000,000,000.

Much of Gold Here Subject To Withdrawal

Sterilization Plan Insulates Banks Against Shock of Recall.

New York, Nov. 4.—The action of the Treasury in sterilizing gold, examined against the background of why gold has been coming to the United States, is described as an ingenious and simple method of insulating the banking system against the shock of gold withdrawals from this country when and as foreign balances are withdrawn, in a study entitled "The Balance of Payments and the Flow of Gold," issued today by Tri-Continental Corporation.

The tramendous movement of gold to this country, beginning in 1934 and continuing through the first nine months of 1937, the study indicates, represents almost entirely a net inflow of capital for the purchase of securities or the transfer of short term funds, rather than for debt payments, for excess of exports over imports or for other normal aspects of international trade.

Imports Create Problem.

Monetary imports in 1934 were $1,200,000,000 it is pointed out; in 1935 they were almost $2,000,000,000; in 1936 they exceeded $1,000,000,000, and in the first nine months of 1937 they have been nearly $1,500,000,000 more. It is the gold imports of 1934-36, plus those of 1937, the study asserts, which have created the "gold problem" for the American Treasury and the banking system.

Although the amount of "hot money" resulting from gold imports is open to question, the study reveals that a substantial part of the inflow of short term funds in the first half of 1937 came here for temporary reasons and that obviously such money is, in a real sense, "hot," subject to early recall.

"The short-term foreign money here is partly frightened money or money here only temporarily to take advantage of the unusual foreign exchange situation," says the study. "So if confidence returns in Europe (and notably in France) or short-term interest rates tighten in London, a portion of these funds will probably be taken home, perhaps with promptness."

London Gold Sells Above U. S. Price

London, Nov. 4 (AP).—So keen was the demand for gold in the London market today that buyers paid a premium of 18 cents an ounce over the American parity price for the approximately $2,000,000 available. Purchasers were said to represent continental interests desiring the metal for hoarding purposes.

The price at which gold can be purchased here and shipped profitably to the United States is figured at $34.76 an ounce. Today's free market price was the equivalent of $34.94, representing the highest premium of the year.

Stocks Rally After Early Losses Up to 3 Points; Trading Is Lighter.

New York, Nov. 4.—Not much more could be said about the stock market today than that the steady decline dating back several days was arrested, but the recovery was not carried far enough to be impressive. An early decline up to 3 points, a slow recovery for the best part of two hours and then an aimless drifting of prices during the afternoon left stocks slightly above or below their previous closings. The turnover was smaller, at less than 1,500,000 shares. December wheat dropped 2⅛ cents to 89¾ cents a bushel and cotton was easier.

Motor, steel and chemical stocks were the most vulnerable groups during the early selling pressure and while these covered much ground on the recovery their prices were generally lower at the close. A large percentage of transactions, it was noted, continued to be concentrated in a handful of stocks. A number of preferred issues gave up four points or more on light offerings, including American Locomotive, Goodyear, Pittsburgh Steel, Remington Rand, Interchemical and Republic Steel.

Trading was resumed in the speculative markets without benefit of any new light on the position. Secretary Morgenthau refused to discuss the Treasury's plans for tax revision, but the more hopeful element in the financial district was cheered somewhat by reports that a strong movement is under way in Congress to turn aside from the pageant of New Deal prosperity and face the chilly fact of a business recession, one that is coming when collection of revenue by the Treasury, under the present tax system, already has passed the peak, and when the outlay of the Treasury continues to exceed by many millions the income.

Lower Tax; Higher Revenue.

It is not true to say that Wall Street is interested in taxes solely because of the effect they may have on its profits—on the profits of corporations directly and on the income of individuals directly for payments received and indirectly for enhancement of value of investments. Wall Street seems to realize better than the powers at Washington give indication of realizing that abolishment of certain forms of taxation, as for example, the undistributed profits tax, and abolishment or at least downward revision in the capital gains tax, will not simply lessen the tax burden on individuals and on business; it will also increase the Treasury's revenues.

Heavy losses on income tax account are bound to be registered in this market, and while many corporations will prefer to pay the penalty tax than to distribute all their profits in dividends, the cost to them of capital will thereby be excessive. No corporation would pay so much for its funds unless it intended them to be used solely as insurance against a bad depression. No new business enterprise is likely to be undertaken with funds obtained as profits and retained only at the expense of the severe tax on undistributed profits.

Same End, Different Means.

Wall Street knows that hard times are sure to follow a continuation of the unbalanced budget situation, and for that reason wishes to see large tax revenues go to the Treasury, but at the same time believes in plugging the unnecessary outlets for the billions already collected from taxpayers. It is perhaps too much to hope for revision of both the capital gains (or capital losses, it might be called this year) tax and the undistributed profits tax. The latter is preferable. The stock market would now be rising had it not been for the President's recent hint that he would oppose a revision of the tax.

Much the same difference can be found between the President's views on relief and those of business. It is scarcely a question of helping the profit-making businessman and neglecting the unemployed wage-earner, but of recognizing the fact that wages come from business. Anything that will stimulate industry is bound to bring higher employment and higher real wages. The cruelest tax that can be levied is that which must be borne by the poor in and after an inflationary boom, and genuine emergency inflation is going to be the only way out for the Administration if it persists too long on its present course.

The country has reached a stage in recovery which probably is too far advanced to bring real distress this winter, although some excuse might be found for resumption of heavy spending by the Government. Public confidence and a lowering of wage scales this winter is predicted in some quarters. Whether that will keep pace with an expected fall in commodity prices is a question. Usually prices fall the faster. The Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. observes: "Continued steady rise in home rentals and clothing prices during the third quarter of 1937, together with a slight drop in average monthly wages earned, has erased most of the gains scored during the first half of this year in the buying power of the average American family."

Price Fixing.

Brazilian coffee growers have shown that they can produce coffee faster than the Brazilian government can burn it. No doubt Secretary Wallace will find that American wheat and corn growers are even more energetic than the South American coffee planters. Perhaps even the cotton share cropper will, if given time enough, produce cotton faster than the Government can stow it away under its 12-cent tarpaulins. Abandonment of the Brazilian coffee price-fixing scheme marks failure No. 15 or 20 in the series begun since the depression and which embraces rubber, copper, tin, wheat, corn, beef, pork, potatoes, cotton, sugar, petroleum and silver.

Retail Trade.

The head of one of New York's large department stores sizes up the retail position this way: "Retail trade lags about three months behind layoffs in basic industries, and the full force of the decline might be expected to hit retailers December 1. Christmas trade probably will delay it until January. For the first nine months of our fiscal year which ends January 30, sales were only about 8 or 9 per cent higher than a year earlier. Sales each month have been above the same month of a year ago, but the rise has been less than expected. The fall in trade first began to be felt in May."

For the Record.

Just to keep the record straight, the Federal Reserve Board sometimes is suspected of being subservient to the Treasury and to act in accordance with political expediency. It is not, as some commentators seem to think, the other way around. One prominent observer writes apropos deflationary measures of the authorities: "Without the slightest attention to what the Treasury was doing, the Federal Reserve Board embarked on a deflationary policy of its own . . . and sterilized about a billion and a half of gold." That was the Treasury's own little scheme, which it carried out without paying any attention to the wishes or advice of any member of the Federal Reserve Board, a body which in any event hadn't any power to sterilize or do anything else with gold, not even to hold gold.

Worthington Addresses D. C. Underwriters

Howe Life Executive Explains Planning of Sales Program.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Planning of a life insurance sales program was outlined yesterday to members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association by William P. Worthington, superintendent of agencies of the Home Life Insurance Co. of New York. Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the group at the Willard Hotel, Mr. Worthington discussed "Program Selling."

Likening today's salesmen of life insurance to authors of the best books or plays, he explained they do three things: Outline a problem, work out its solution, and make the characters solve it. The theme must be real and the characters must have much the same emotions and reactions as the spectators, or readers.

The modern underwriter must do the same for his clients that the author or playwright does for his readers or audience. He must find the problems in every situation that life insurance can solve. He must plan for their best possible solution and bring clients to a full understanding of both the problems and their solution, so that they will want to solve them. If the client wants to solve his problems, the speaker reminded, he will purchase the life insurance plan that will be a solution, but if he does not want to, he will not buy no matter how hard someone tries to sell him.

Planned Estates.

Mr. Worthington, who has been both a home office man, a general agent in the field, and an official during his 17 years in life underwriting, has perfected a method of presenting solutions that life insurance offers men and women for their problems in what he calls "Planned Estates." He explained the details of this method very thoroughly in his address, and advised training of men and women underwriters to plan life insurance in the careful and deliberate way offered by the provisions of the companies' contracts, instead of indifferently or in haphazard manner.

Mr. Worthington, like most leaders in the life insurance business, offers his ideas and plan for modern underwriting to the entire profession in the hope that the benefits of properly planned estates may be available to the public through representatives of all companies. He emphasized that it is the duty of the underwriter to help the purchaser of life insurance in the right kind of planning, in the light of the underwriter's complete knowledge of the client's problems. From such co-operation between client and underwriter comes the only satisfying and successful selling, he concluded.

President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, one of the best known and ablest leaders in the local and national banking fields, marked his forty-seventh anniversary this week. Mr. Fleming is a former president of the District of Columbia and American Bankers associations. He is a member of the executive council of the latter organization and is constantly consulted on matters of importance to the association and the banking profession in general. A director in numerous corporations, both in Washington and New York, Mr. Fleming has given valuable assistance to many civic organizations. At the request of former President Hoover, he is now serving on the directorate of Boys Clubs of America, and at the request of Secretary Roper, is serving on the Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce.

Residential Appraisers.

Edmund J. McCormick, of New York City, first vice president of the Society of Residential Appraisers, will be in Washington for the meeting of the joint committee on appraisal and mortgage analysis tomorrow and is expected to address the meeting. He will be accompanied by Franklin Hardinge, jr., of Chicago, secretary of the society.

This will be the final meeting of the joint committee before the National Forum, which is scheduled to be held in Washington November 19 and 20 under the auspices of six organizations, including the society, the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, the National Association of Housing Officials, the Farm Credit Administration, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Housing Administration.

American Security.

Extensive improvements have been completed in the banking room and equipment at the Central Branch of the American Security & Trust Co., located at Seventh street and Massachusettts avenue northwest. The increase in business of this office has made the changes necessary and desirable.

The lobby has been substantially enlarged and additional space for the officers has been arranged which will provide greater convenience and more rapid service to customers. In addition, new and more spacious facilities have been provided for arranging and discussing of new accounts.

The tellers' cages have been enlarged and furnished with modern steel equipment, including low steel partitions. All offices have been equipped with the latest improved walnut and leather furniture, while decorations have been made to harmonize in color.

The three floors of the building occupied by the branch have been renovated and redecorated. Through the improvements, safe deposit, foreign exchange and other departments are now better prepared to render services to the public.

The Central Branch of the company was originally the main office of the Home Savings Bank, which was merged with the American Security & Trust Co. in 1919.

Edward E. Swan, Richard E. Harris, Charles C. Boswell and James L. Goldsmith, assistant treasurers of the company, are in charge of the branch.

Cotton Lower; Range Narrow

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—December cotton established a new low for the season today but prices later recovered and moved over a narrow range. March advanced from 7.64 to 7.71 and closed at 7.69 with final prices unchanged to 3 points net lower.

The market opened 4 to 6 points lower in response to easy cables. December dropped to 7.58 under near month liquidation as the list sold off to net losses of 6 to 8 points. This price was 2 points under the low touched on October 8 when the American crop was forecast at 17,573,000 bales. Prices recovered to around the previous closing levels during the noon hour but there was little follow-up to the demand.

Members of the New York Cotton Exchange on the average are looking for a Government report next Monday of 17,816,000 bales, according to a canvass.

Exports today 40,051 making a total of 1,796,720 for the season thus far. Port receipts 34,335; U. S. port stocks 3,225,725.

Payment will be made December 15 to stockholders of record November 15. Copper Price Cut To 11½c a Pound

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—The American Smelting & Refining Co. offered copper on the market today at 11½ cents a pound, a reduction of ¼ cent. The customs division of the industry has taken the lead recently in several downward revisions in the price. The last was on October 28, with a smelter cut the price to 11¾ cents a pound from 12 cents.

Producers have generally lagged in following reductions and of late are said to have been doing little business.

Bob Burns Says—

I been gettin' so many liars medals lately, I think it's about time I was defendin' myself! It ain't that I need to tell falsehoods. It's just that I keep on talkin' so much I finally hang myself. The reason some people have a reputation for honesty is because they know when to stop talkin'.

When Grandpa Snazzy was out here I took him to one of these Hollywood parties and he come back with his derby all smashed. When Grandma asked him how it happened, he was honest about it—that is, up to a certain point. He told her that a girl had sat on it. She says, "Well, now, if you couldn't find a nail to hang your derby on, you shoulda held it on your lap!" And that's where Grandpa was smart and stopped talkin'. To this day he hasn't told her that the derby was in his lap—when the girl sat on it!

3 Democracies In Peace Front Against Fascists

New Overtures to Japan, Reich Planned; Powers to Ask Tokyo Terms.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Brussels, Nov. 4.—The United States joined forces tonight with Britain and France in an evident move to mobilize world opinion against the "Fascist menace" as the Far Eastern peace conference struggled to overcome Italo-German-Japanese resistance.

The 19 nations of the conference, which ran up against Fascist defiance at the outset, agreed to a new attempt to lure Japan and Germany into peace negotiations.

There was scant hope, however, that either Japan or Germany would consent to join the negotiations based on the Nine-Power Washington Treaty of 1922 which sought to guarantee the territorial and political sovereignty of China.

It was indicated the big democracies—the United States, Britain and France—were temporarily abandoning their efforts toward bringing about an armistice in the Orient for a more far-reaching objective.

Plan Approach to Tokyo.

They apparently were determined to give Germany, Italy and Japan "plenty of rope" and an opportunity to come out again in an effort to wreck the conference. In this way, it was believedpublic opinion would be crystallied against the entente.

The move was expertly put in motion when eight powers, all but one of whom are original signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, met in secret conference and agreed with the American delegates that a small committee — probably Britain, France and the United States—should approach the Tokyo government and obtain its terms for a peace with China.

The eight powers also decided Germany, although it followed Japan in boycotting the parley, might be invited again.

The conference ran up against a new deadlock over the composition of the committee which will approach China and Japan—and a scheduled meeting of the full conference tonight was called off until tomorrow.

Italy Again Objects.

Difficulties cropped up when Italy, Russia and several other powers insiste they be included on the "Committee of Approach."

Other powers in the "chamber session" were Italy, Netherlands, Belgium, Portugal and Russia. Only Russia is not a signatory of the 1922 treaty.

During the meeting Paul Spaak, Belgian foreign minister, proposed the small committee offer its "good offices" to both Japan and China.

Count Luigi Aldrovandi-Marescotti, Italian delegate who yesterday berated President Roosevelt's suggestion of a "quarantine" of aggressor nations and asserted the Brussels conference was "useless," again objected. All the conference should do, he asserted, is invite China and Japan to settle their dispute among themselves.

Norman H. Davis, America's roving ambassador, Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain curtly rejected the Italian demand with assertions it would constitute "abandonment" of the Nine-Power Treaty.

War for Peace, Says Wang.

Ambassador Chengting T. Wang, of China, said in a speech here last night that China's fight against Japan is a "fight for democracy."

"Democracies are dedicated to peace—peace among themselves, peace for all nations," he said. "China, as a democratic nation, has made itself manifest in the eyes of the world as a peace-loving nation and her people as peace lovers. What China is fighting for today is for peace—for democracy."

Wang said "war is the language of dictators." The Chinese people have had dictators but never liked them, he said.

He quoted a disciple of Confucius as giving a slogan for democracy when he said: "Most precious are the people; next come land and grain; and last only the princes."

Wang indicated for the first time since his arrival as envoy here that his government is interested in removal of the extraterritorial rights which certain nations, including the United States, enjoy in China.

Candidacies Indorsed By Takoma Park Club

Meeting in the firehouse last night, the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park, Md., voted unanimously to indorse candidacies of two of their members for county office.

These were F. Byrne Austin, running for county commissioner, and Ben. G. Wilkinson, jr., candidate of State's attorney of Montgomery County. The club also sponsored the candidacy of Robert Peter, of Rockville, for the Maryland State Senate.

Super-Cabinet to Declare War Demanded by Japanese Navy

entail a reorganization of the present government under military and naval control with the cabinet members composed of the chiefs of the general army and navy staffs.

The authority of the diet would be restricted and the country would be placed on a typical war basis.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Nov. 5.—The precarious Japanese foothold on the south bank of Soochow Creek became almost untenable today under the lashing fury of a heavily reinforced Chinese attack.

After a day and night of bitter fighting the Japanese claimed to have established a 1,000-yard-long position on the south bank of the creek, which snakes through the International Settlement to the west. A survey of the front line last night showed the Japanese were holding a sector near Rubicon Village, where they had driven a narrow wedge into the Chinese position about 3 miles west of Shanghai.

Foreign naval observers reported heavy concentrations of Japanese warships in the Wrangpoo River with 42 men-of-war between Shanghai and Woosung and some 40 more near the mouth of the river.

They expressed belief the Japanese intended to make a landing in force in the Pootung industrial area, just across the Whangpoo from Shanghai's bund.

Thousands of fresh Chinese troops, well equipped and disciplined, yesterday moved up to the battle front stretching northwest from Shanghai. The youthful Chinese Legionnaires, using Howitzers, trench mortars, machine guns and hand grenades, struck again and again at the point of the Japanese advance.

The Japanese were attempting to use the foothold to protect a major crossing of the creek, which forms a natural obstacle in front of the right flank of the Chinese "winter defense line."

A Chinese spokesman said Chinese artillery destroyed two of the three military bridges built across the creek by Japanese engineers. Heavy artillery and infantry fighting was going on along the entire line from Jessfield Park, on the western outskirts of Shanghai, 8 miles northwest to Nanziang.

American and other foreign observers expressed belief the first Japanese objective south of the creek was Hungjao Airdome, 3 miles southwest of Rubicon Village.

Brazil Failing In Agreement to Buy U. S. Gold

Morgenthau Reveals Fact as Pertinent to Coffee Dumping Move.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau revealed yesterday Brazil has not, to date, purchased any of the $80,000,000 worth of gold the United States agreed in July to sell the South American republic.

The Secretary of the Treasury said he offered this information because of speculation that abandonment by Brazil yesterday of its coffee subsidy plan might have some effect upon, or relation to, the July agreement.

Besides providing for the sale of gold to Brazil "at such times and in such amounts" as that government may desire, the agreement also provided that the United States make dollar exchange available to Brazil for the promotion of exchange equilibrium. It also promised American assistance in the establishment of a Brazilian central bank.

Morgenthau declined to comment on reported sales of gold by the United States stabilization fund in recent weeks. Discrepancies between official figures on gold imports and the amounts added to the Treasury's inactive gold fund have caused many observers to attribute the difference to sale of gold abroad. The price of gold in the London market has risen to a point above the price the United States will pay for the metal.

The Treasury head said it was "too early" to discuss steps to continue silver price stabilization measures which will expire the first of the year.

He asserted the Treasury had not discussed war debts with the British government.

Hitler Seeks Role As China Umpire

put the question of colonies for Germany in the background.

Early this week there were persistent rumors the Reichstag would be convened as a forum before which Hitler would announce concrete demands.

Moreover, Gen. Franz von Epp, Governor of Bavaria, stated in Munich his Colonial Society and Academy for German Law was working out legal bases for Hitler's claims.

All this now must wait, it was indicated, pending the outcome of expected mediation in the Far East.

Hitler tomorrow, meanwhile, will fortify somewhat his position in central Europe by announcing an agreement with Poland by which minorities on both sides will have rights mutually respected by the two contracting governments.

He will receive spokesmen of the Polish minority in Germany at noon tomorrow.

British Accept Franco Rule on De Facto Basis

Agents to Be Exchanged; Restoration of Spanish Monarchy Promised.

ported, by promising that the monarchy would be restored in Spain and would adopt a foreign policy friendly to Britain and assuring the security of Mediterranean communications and the vital British Gibraltar base.

The prime minister's announcement came a few hours after sections of the British press reported that his cabinet ministers had "decided in their own minds that Franco is going to win the war."

Britain's need of raw materials, particularly Spain's rich deposits of mercury, iron, copper and pyrites that are in Franco's hands, for her $7,500,000,000 rearmament program was believed to have been the major factor in influencing the British decision.

Some measure of "informal" recognition of Franco now, the cabinet ministers were said to have concluded, might prevent these raw materials from coming under Italian or German control if Franco is victor in the civil war.

Commissions to Spain Authorized.

As Chamberlain made his announcement the 27-nation nonintervention committee issued a mandate authorizing the dispatch of two neutral commissions to Spain seeking acceptance by the loyalists and nationalists of a plan of withdrawing all foreign "volunteers" from the battlefronts.

Russia refused again to approve the mandate because it provides for simultaneous discussion of belligerency rights for both Spanish factions when the volunteers withdrawals are under way.

The 27-nation nonintervention committee gave authorization to a subcommittee of nine powers to dispatch the neutral commissions to Spain to arrange for:

1. Restitution of land and sea neutrality control.
2. Withdrawal of volunteers.
3. Immediate granting of "limited" belligerent rights.

It was indicated that instructions would go out tonight to Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain who is now at Hendaye, France, asking him to communicate with the Barcelona and Salamanca governments, and seek an "urgent and prompt reply."

'Bias' Is Charged To FCC by Union

By the Associated Press.

Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of C. I. O. maritime unions, accused the Federal Communications Commission last night of "bias" in declining to hear representatives of the American Radio Telegraphists Association on the application of Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., Botson, for exemption from radio requirements on freighters.

Representatives of the telegraphers' union appeared at the hearing yesterday prepared to testify, Emerson said in a statement, but were told that under commission rules they could not be heard because they had not filed a petition for intervention.

Il Duce May Balk At Hurrying Into Anti-Red Alliance

By the United Press.

Rome, Nov. 4.—Premier Mussolini was reliably reported tonight to be balking at what he regards as German-Japanese attempts to "push" him into signing their anti-Communist pact of last mid-November.

The possibility arose that a last-minute delay might be called by Il Duce and that Italy's signature to the treaty might not be affixed until after the Far Eastern Peace Conference is ended in Brussels, where Italy is represented. Germany and Japan have boycotted the conference.

The German Embassy in Rome announced the pact would be signed Saturday, but Italian official quarters maintained a significant silence.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to London, who negotiated the anti-Communist pact with Japan, left Berlin at noon today and will arrive in Rome tomorrow.

The German Embassy said he would officiate at Italy's signing in Chigi Palace, along with the Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and Japanese Ambassador Hotta.

It was explained the terms of the entente are the same as the German-Japanese pact formally announced last November 24, but that Italy, instead of signing bilateral agreements with Japan and Germany, would confirm the existing pact as a three-power document.

Two Missing Boys Sought by G-Men

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were aiding yesterday in the search for George F. Buchholz, 15, of 2248 Cathedral avenue, and W. C. Barr, 17, of 6417 Thirty-first street northwest, who disappeared from their homes Wednesday afternoon.

Police up and down the seaboard, particularly in Southern cities, have been asked to keep a sharp lookout for the youngsters, who were dressed in rough hiking clothes at the time of their disappearance. They left a note, officials said, saying they were going on a sea voyage.

Young Buchholz is the son of Carl W. Buchholz, an employe of the Justice Department.

'Life Companion' Sues for $2,000,000

Boston, Nov. 4 (AP).—Carleton Upham, of New York, who claimed he agreed with the socially prominent Mrs. Marcella Upham, of Boston, to be her "companion and shape his life according to her needs," if she left him the bulk of her estate, today brought suit for $2,000,000 against the executor of the estate.

Upham charged he received only $10,000 under the will, probated last March. The bulk of the estate was left to a niece, Miss Maude Morse, of Boston, and the remainder to charitable and private institutions. The papers did not indicate whether Upham was related to Mrs. Upham.

"I told an ENGINEER the specifications for greatness in a whiskey"

"I've put Four Roses Whiskey to the test—and found it has just about everything I've been looking for in a whiskey. But what makes it so grand?"

I SAID
"Jim, picture several engineers—each famous for some special ability—combined in one engineer. He'd be somewhat remarkable, wouldn't he?"

HE SAID

I SAID
"Sure, he'd have everything. And that's why we say Four Roses has everything—because it's several top-quality straight whiskies (and only straight whiskies!) combined in one.

"Each of these straight whiskies is outstanding in some quality—aroma, body, smoothness, or flavor. And by blending them together, with a skill born of four generations' experience, we combine the virtues of them all in one superb whiskey.

"So, naturally, when you taste Four Roses you're bound to find a rare combination of virtues. And that's why we believe Four Roses is America's finest whiskey, regardless of age or price."
